You know about the strain of our seed. All of our plants have large, finely marked foliage, immense flowers in bright, clear colors, borne on stiff stems. Our strains stand up no matter how hot the day.
We can't ship right now on account of the railroad strike.
This must be settled soon. It will be settled soon.

last, and the Puget sound country is itself again. Two inches of rain fell, putting out the huge forest fires which had obscured the sun for two months and over. The dull season among the florists has been a little worse than usual and probably would have been more so if the unusual weather conditions noted above had not prevailed.

Mr. Kloepper, of the Hayden-Watson Co., remarked last week: "It is picking up a little, but not enough to brag about." Looking over the downtown displays, it must be confessed that none of the stock is up to the usual standard of flowers grown here. However, some good-looking Halley, Chicago White, Niagara and several other varieties of gladioli are on display. Sweet peas in abundance are shown, and the shops have eight or ten holders of them in their windows, but only one or two of asters, zinnias, carnations, marigolds, etc. Funeral work has been light and there have been no social functions of any note.

The Seattle and Tacoma florists picnicked together at Enumclaw August 20. There is a spirit of good fellowship between Seattle, Portland and Tacoma florists, which vents itself whenever an opportunity to get together exists.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Cummings, of the Leading Floral Co., of Corvallis, Ore., made a special trip by automobile to Tacoma to investigate electric heat for greenhouses. They have three houses, 30x70 feet, and are planning to build several more. They have been offered a satisfactory rate by the home power company. Mr. Cummings said he saw the articles on heating by wire in The Review; hence the trip to Tacoma.

The Kenwood Greenhouse management is planning to build another greenhouse, 26x50 feet, just as soon as the city power plant is able to furnish the current for heating, which will be in a few weeks. The city has sold its peak load and no more can be contracted for heating purposes until the new auxiliary plant is completed. L. B. M.

Alfred Pefferlaw is planning to build a new house at Pefferlaw.

Cedars are growing in popularity. Large quantities of these are being shipped to points in the United States as well as in Canada. Last week Alfred Wilson shipped them as far south as Louisville, Ky. At the Montreal convention, interest in cedars was shown by the keen attention given S. A. Frost when he gave an extensive demonstration on the use of cedar in preparing various kinds of sprays and designs.

A scarcity of bulbs is reported and the abundance of them last season is

The New Wonder Fern

NOW READY IN 2-INCH POTS, AT

$30.00 per 100

This magnificent fern is now so well known that no description is necessary. We sold out completely this spring and those who were disappointed in obtaining stock have now their opportunity.

For cutting it is absolutely the best variety in cultivation. Fronds sent from Los Angeles to Indianapolis on the occasion of the National Flower Show were awarded a Silver Medal. This speaks volumes for its keeping qualities and it is the freest grower of all Adiantums, the fronds frequently attaining a length of 24 inches under ordinary cultivation.

Argali & Basher, Todmorden, are putting up a Lord & Burnham house. H. J. Mills, of Richmond Hill, is also putting up one of the same construction.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Association had a real, big picnic at Eversley, the country place of Lady Eaton, at King, Ont. The party traveled by electric cars and automobiles from Toronto and were welcomed by P. L. Whytock, the superintendent of the estate. Most of the growers were represented and took part in the various events. The grounds were beautiful; a great deal of landscape gardening has been done since the picnic was held there last year. Races were in charge of W. Foord and A. Simpson. President F. Clark is absent in England.

Mrs. George Thompson is visiting in England.

Messrs. McFadden and Hatcher remained after the Montreal convention and were motored out to Plattsville by Montreal florists.

W. E. Groves, of Hamilton, past-president of the C. F. G. A., remained at Montreal after the convention and August 16 addressed the Rotary Club on "Say It with Flowers." There was a large attendance and the address was much appreciated. Mr. and Mrs. Groves were presented with a silver service at Montreal in appreciation of the work of President Groves, who officiated during the last two years.

A life membership was given E. J. Hayward by his Montreal confreres for his untiring efforts to make the convention a success.

The following officers of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association were elected at Montreal: President, C. J. Hay, Brockville, Ont.; vice-presidents, W. C. Hall, Montreal, and S. Kirk, Georgetown; secretary, H. J. Eddy, Montreal; directors (three years), F. McKenna, S. A. McFadden and Mr. Taylor; (two years), S. Jordan, R. Burrows and H. E. Groves; (one year), A. M. Terrill, Alex Simpson and W. H. Gray. The officers of the retail section are: Chairman, S. A. McFadden; vice-chairman, W. C. Hall; secre-

President, Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J.; secretary, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THEODORE OUTERBRIDGE, of Sunnylands, Bermuda, was a Boston visitor last week.

THE Henry F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, no longer stamps its 2-cent mail. Instead, one of the new postage-paid meters is used, their permit being No. 14.

THE Humboldt Evergreen Co., Fortuna, Cal., states it has about 45,000 Paper Whites in its field. Part of them are of salable size this year and the rest coming on for next season.

WHEN last heard from, Albert Hopkins Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, who is touring New England in his car, had just left Boston, where he had enjoyed a fine visit with friends; he was continuing northward.

R. B. HOWE, president of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, who attended the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City, proceeded from there with his wife to Yellowstone National park, where they will spend a number of weeks on vacation. Mr. Howe plans to return to Chicago about Labor day.

MUCH publicity has been given the Burpee sweet pea, President Harding, which was given the highest award of the National Sweet Pea Society of Great Britain in its trials. The Philadelphia North American, August 13, gave it a front-page story and a picture on a later page. The W. Atlee Burpee Co. will not send out seed of this variety until 1924.

THE annual American consumption of muskmelon seed is approximately 600,000 pounds. One pound of seed is produced from forty muskmelons and 12,000 to 14,000 melons are produced to the acre. There are about forty varieties in general use, but most of these are of inferior quality. Owing to uneven ripening, harvesting of the seed is usually done three times.

VEGETABLE SEED CROP LARGE.

The aggregate commercial acreage and prospective production of vegetable seed this year is considerably larger than last year and about equal to 1920, but it does not approach that of 1918 and 1919. Reports submitted to the United States Department of Agriculture during July indicate that the average growing condition of all crops July 1 was good, with the exception of garden beet and carrot in California, and cabbage, kale, spinach and turnip in Washington. In many instances the condition was better than at the same time last year.

The outstanding increases in the acreage over last year are: Dwarf snap beans, 150 per cent; garden peas, fifty per cent; sweet corn, ninety per cent; garden beet, sixty per cent; carrot, 125 per cent; kale, 250 per cent; lettuce, eighty-five per cent; watermelon, forty-two per cent; parsnip, 143 per cent; radish, forty-five per cent; salsify, 210 per cent; spinach, 1,780 per cent, and tomato, ninety-five per cent. The cucumber acreage is ten per cent larger than the average of the past five years. Onion sets are reported to be in only fair condition, but with a twenty per cent increase in acreage the production probably will exceed that of last year.

With only 1,129 acres of sugar beet seed reported, the production of this seed will be the smallest since 1915 and, based on the growing condition of the crop July 1, will not exceed seven per cent of the annual requirements. The muskmelon seed acreage is twenty per cent less than last year, but equal to 1920, and one-fourth larger than 1919. A reduction of approximately thirty-five per cent is noted in the acreage of both summer and winter squash, with condition fair to good.

The average condition of the various vegetable seed crops for the United States July 1, 1919, 1920 and 1922 is given in the table below. The condition designations given in the table have the following percentage equivalents compared with normal: Very good=above normal; good=seventy-five per cent to 100 per cent of normal; fair=fifty per cent to seventy-five per cent of normal; poor=twenty-five per cent to fifty per cent of normal; failure below twenty-five per cent of normal.

LOWER PRICES IN SEED BIDS.

Generally lower prices for seeds are shown by the awards just made by the Department of Agriculture for seed for congressional distribution, as compared with quotations received last year. The agricultural appropriation bill for the current fiscal year continued the appropriation of $360,000 for free seeds, which was the amount provided last year, and bids were opened August 1. The department has a selected list of bidders who, it is claimed, comprise

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

George Malcolmson, Hamilton, Ont.—"Holland-grown Bulbs," a 4-page list, in which tulips occupy the largest space, though a few of the leading varieties of narcissi also are offered.

W. E. Marshall & Co., Inc., New York, N. Y.—"Bulbs and Peonies," an attractive 16-page catalogue, clearly printed on enameled paper. It is exceptionally well illustrated, almost entirely in colors.

H. G. Hastings Co., Atlanta, Ga.—"Hasting's Seeds," an illustrated autumn catalogue of seeds and bulbs, with a strong argument in favor of late summer and fall gardening in the south; forty-eight pages, in a tasteful black and white cover. A specialty is made of strains of seed peculiarly adapted for the southern states. An enclosed circular contains a special offer of vegetable and field seeds, "for prompt orders."

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Pittsburgh, Pa. A fully illustrated catalogue of ribbons, chiffons, baskets, willow vases, fern stands, wire designs and other supplies for florists; forty-eight large pages, well printed on a fine quality of paper and bound in a substantial, tasteful green cover. No catalogue of supplies, of course, can be all-inclusive, since florists' needs for decorative purposes are almost innumerable, but the book is sufficiently comprehensive to serve as clear evidence, at least, of the completeness of the company's stock. The listed varieties of artificial foliage are especially numerous, forming "the most complete line in the country," according to the catalogue.

are beginning to wilt and turn yellow. The tomatoes ripen before they have attained their full size. E. G. P.—O.

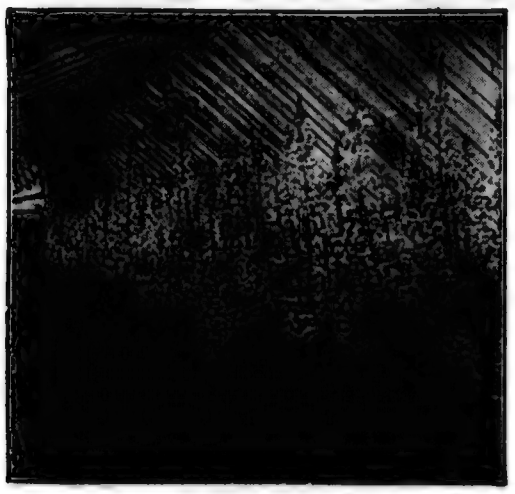
Your trouble may be mildew, which, if allowed to go unchecked, will soon completely ruin a house of plants. The foliage of the plants will be spotted in appearance and later will dry up, causing an almost complete loss of leaves and a consequent inferior crop of small fruit. To guard against this, always preserve a dry atmosphere in your tomato house. Never syringe the plants, as you would cucumbers. Do not keep a close, stuffy atmosphere, but give the plants some ventilation at all times.

At the first appearance of discoloration of the foliage, spray the plants with potassium sulphide or dust them with powdered sulphur through a dust sprayer of some kind; an ordinary powder bellows will answer for a small house. Repeat the operation, if necessary. Foot-rot frequently causes trouble among tomatoes under glass. The infection usually comes from the soil and is carried over from year to year. High temperatures, thick seeding, careless watering and a too stuffy atmosphere will all help to breed the trouble, which may not show until the plants are well advanced. Freezing of the soil in the winter will help, but sterilization by steam or soaking with a solution of formaldehyde is the best way to clear your soil of this disease. C. W.

GROWING LETTUCE.

Can you give me complete instructions on how to grow head lettuce? What varieties are best? I have had no success growing it outdoors.

A. E. W.—Minn.



To grow good head lettuce you want a light, rich soil, one containing plenty of humus matter in the form of horse manure. Rich soil is absolutely necessary for the production of head lettuce; no chemical fertilizers are satisfactory. It can be grown in raised benches or ground beds, but the latter are much the best. Seeds for an early fall crop may be sown on or about August 1. Seedlings should be pricked out and later transplanted to their permanent places. Given a ground bed and a substantial depth of soil, one watering at planting time should suffice to finish off a crop, provided the soil is kept stirred among the plants. The plants are encouraged to make deep roots and will head up splendidly under this treatment during winter. Excellent forcing head lettuces are French Unrivaled and May King. A suitable winter temperature for lettuce is 45 degrees at night, with a corresponding rise in the daytime. Ventilate freely on all possible occasions. C. W.

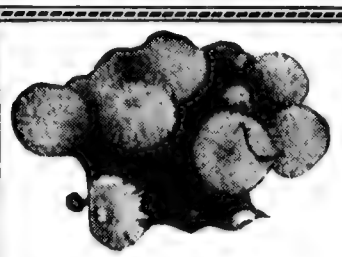
FUSARIUM WILT ON TOMATOES.

I have mailed you under separate cover a specimen of my tomato plants, which are affected with some disease. The plot where these tomatoes are has been planted with tomatoes for several years. Six years ago the plot was seeded to lawn; it was again plowed this spring and planted to tomatoes. All of the plants have shown the same diseased condition. Can you tell me what this is, and whether or not it can be corrected by sterilizing the soil?

C. D. S.—Wis.

The tomatoes forwarded all showed clear evidence of the fusarium wilt, which frequently attacks this vegetable. Other affected vegetables, outdoors or indoors, include the potato, asparagus,

SNAPDRAGON



BE WISE and have a big supply of Snapdragon the coming winter. There's a reason. Coal will be scarce and high; carnation plants are of poor quality and scarce, and bulb stock, particularly Paper Whites, will be high. Get busy and have a lot of seedling snapdragons ready to fill all empty space. Seed may be sown any time. Plants should be ready to bench in from 60 to 75 days.

cabbage, pea, cucumber, sweet corn, lettuce, sweet potato and watermelon. Tomatoes are frequently attacked, both outdoors and under glass, by fusarium, the forms of which will remain in the ground for several years, ready to attack any varieties of vegetables that are not immune.

Under glass, sterilization by steam is the most effective remedy. Next to this in value comes formaldehyde. This latter has proved valuable under glass and has also done considerable good when used outdoors. Much of the fusarium wilt and allied ailments have their inception in the seed beds, and it is well to sterilize soils and receptacles well before using them.

Four pounds (pints) of commercial formaldehyde are added to fifty gallons of water and the solution applied to the soil at the rate of a gallon per square foot. The soil should be moist and should have been well loosened before applying the formaldehyde. It is also better not to plant out anything for eight or ten days after sterilizing. This may or may not prove effective outdoors with you, but would be worth a trial. It is not advisable to plant any of the vegetables named, which are liable to be attacked, for three or four years.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

GROWERS of phlox report unusually heavy advance orders for fall delivery. The newer varieties justify the increased attention they are receiving.

W. A. TOOLE, of Wm. Toole & Son, Baraboo, Wis., attended the summer meeting of the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, at Sturgeon Bay, August 17 and 18, making the trip by automobile.

THE W. H. Letton Seed Co., of Atlanta, Ga., has opened a landscape department. The firm will shortly issue a catalogue covering this branch of the work. H. L. Alexander, who will be in charge, has already secured a number of large orders.

IMPORTS OF STOCKS.

Two announcements have been issued by the federal horticultural board with regard to imports of nursery items. One limits the entry of rose stock to 1 and 2-year-old plants. The other allows entry until July 1, 1923, of stocks of Rhododendron ponticum and Azalea pontica seedlings, as well as seedlings for grafting of Acer palmatum, or Japanese maple. The first announcement, under date of August 9, reads as follows:

Item 3 of regulation 3 of the rules and regulations supplemental to quarantine 37 provides for the entry under permit of rose stocks for propagation, including Manetti, multiflora, brier rose and Rosa rugosa.

Since the entry of such material always carries the risk of permitting the introduction of dangerous insect pests and plant diseases, such material will hereafter be restricted to the smallest sizes possible; namely, 1 and 2-year-old plants not over eighteen inches in length. Stems on which to bud standard roses will not be permitted entry under the provisions of this regulation.

The second announcement, bearing date of August 11, reads as follows:

The federal horticultural board has investigated the availability of stocks for grafting purposes of Rhododendron ponticum and Azalea pontica seedlings, the importation of which under special permits ceased June 1, 1922, in accordance with notice issued February 1, 1921. It appears that heavy losses have been suffered in the imported lots of these stock materials and that American-grown seedlings are not yet available. It has been decided, therefore, to extend for one season, or until July 1, 1923, the period during which seedlings of these two plants may be imported. Special permits will be issued for plants of three years' growth or under, with the roots washed free of sand, soil or earth.

It has also been represented that a sufficient supply of seedlings of Japanese maple, Acer palmatum, for grafting purposes is not available in this country. This matter has been investigated by the specialists of the Department of Agriculture and upon their recommendation special permits will likewise be granted for the importation of seedlings of this maple of three years' growth or under for the period terminating July 1, 1923. The plants must have their roots washed free of sand, soil or earth.

The entry of these plants under special permit will be surrounded with the same safeguards which apply to other special permits issued under quarantine 37. Application for permits should be made on form 207.

Both announcements were signed by W. A. Orton, as acting chairman of the federal horticultural board, in the absence of Dr. Marlatt in the west.

move to Mentor avenue, where he has fifteen acres under cultivation. The tract there, known as the Hawgood farm, consists of 315 acres, at stop 75 on the C., P. & E. electric. It adjoins Martin Kohankie's land. At Mr. Murphy's new place is a large greenhouse for propagating and the new location will give him ample facilities for expansion. He intends to progress, adding to acreage and stock each year, and modestly says he "hopes to be a real nurseryman by 1925."

He has erected a sign, bearing the florists' slogan, "Say It with Flowers," and the further inscription, "Thomas J. Murphy Nurseries, Painesville, O."

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HEATING TWO HOUSES.

We have mailed you a sketch of our range. Kindly examine this sketch and advise us regarding the heating requirements of the range. We wish to maintain 50 degrees when the outside temperature goes to 20 or 30 degrees below zero. C. P. L.—Pa.

The sketch shows two houses, 29x100 feet, built together, with three feet of concrete and three feet of glass in the exposed wall of each house. The sash-bars are sixteen feet long.

The plan suggested in the sketch is to run two 2-inch flow pipes in each house, each of which will supply two 1¼-inch returns on the side walls of each house. It is suggested that, if necessary, one or two extra returns be run on the west wall of the west house, which is exposed to the usually prevailing cold winds.

The plan for the piping is excellent, and the number of pipes in each of the houses would answer well for a house twenty feet wide, but for a house twenty-nine feet in width, with three feet of glass in the wall, it is but little more than one-half of what will be required by the two houses described above, and even then it will require hard firing to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees when it is 20 to 30 degrees below zero.

It would be advisable to use either one 2¼-inch or two 2-inch overhead flows, with seven 1¼-inch returns in each house, placing four on the outer walls.

HEATING HOUSE AND HOTBED.

We are erecting a greenhouse, 21x75 feet, running east and west, with an office at the west end. There are three feet of glass in the side walls. We expect to heat this house with hot water, with the boiler located under the office. The temperature to be maintained is 55 to 60 degrees at zero weather and not less than 50 degrees when the outside temperature goes as low as 20 degrees below zero. What radiating capacity should the boiler have? It is also possible that we shall use the boiler to heat some hotbeds in the spring and add twenty feet more to the house later on. H. W. F.—Ia.

It would be well to use three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns in heating the above house. If 1½-inch returns are to be used, fifteen of these will be required. For a house seventy-five feet in length, you have little choice between 2-inch and 1½-inch returns. If the plan in mind is carried out and twenty feet is added to the length of the house, it would be preferable to have 2-inch pipes as the returns.

The area of the hotbeds is not stated,

Kroeschell Dependable Hot Water Boilers

With your houses equipped with a Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler you need not fear that your crops will be hurt by low temperature. Under adverse weather conditions, when crops are in most danger, it is easy to regulate temperatures with Kroeschell Boilers.

That Kroeschell Boilers are the safest and most economical, has been proved by their country-wide use in large and small establishments, owned by the wisest growers, where only the best of equipment is used, and where the best of stock is raised.

but if they are to be heated, allowance should be made for it and the boiler chosen should have capacity accordingly.

We judge that a boiler should have a rating of about double that required. While it will vary in different makes of boilers, it will be about 1,800 square feet of radiation and this will generally mean a grate twenty-eight inches in diameter.

ESTIMATING RADIATION.

How many 2-inch returns will a 4-inch feed pipe handle successfully? How many 2-inch returns will a 3-inch feed pipe handle successfully? How many 1½-inch returns will a 3-inch feed pipe handle successfully? How many 1¼-inch returns will a 3-inch feed pipe handle successfully? The heat is obtained from hot water. The houses are 150 feet long. W. M. M.—Can.

Had the information been a little more explicit regarding the width of the houses and whether the feed pipes would also afford radiation as overhead flows, it would have been possible to give a more definite answer.

In cases such as stated above, where the feed pipes supply a considerable amount of radiation, this should be deducted when the area of the returns which the feed pipes will supply is estimated.

When a greenhouse is 150 feet long, a 3-inch main will supply 600 square feet of radiation, and if the feed pipe is an overhead main flow pipe, it will supply five 2-inch returns, in addition to its own radiating surface.

A 4-inch feed pipe will supply about 1,200 square feet of radiation, or ten 2-inch return pipes, in addition to the area of the feed pipe itself.

We do not advise the use of 1¼-inch and 1½-inch returns in houses longer than fifty or seventy-five feet.

While larger pipes may be used to advantage as main feed pipes, we prefer to use 2½-inch overhead flows and 2-inch return pipes in houses of this length.

of mums and will soon start cutting Early Frost and Yellow Frost.

Well flowered plants of the chimney flower, Campanula pyramidalis, were noted at Penn's the past week. Houghton-Gorney Co. and Carbone's had nice plants of the pure white Campanula isophylla alba, which makes an excellent subject for a basket or pan. This plant is much grown abroad and great numbers are sold in Covent Garden market, London, each year. A splendid hardy campanula for the garden, still flowering splendidly, is C. lactiflora cœrulea one of the finest of all blue plants for the garden. It is a good grower, a free bloomer and one flowering over a long season. W. N. C.

FOUR STATES REPORT.

That business continues to be good with those who use The Review's Classified advertisements is shown by extracts from the daily mail. Like this:

Please discontinue my carnation ad, as I am entirely sold out.—William P. Yeagle, Bristol, Pa., August 14, 1922.

Kindly cancel our ad on smilax in The Review, as we are sold out on that item.—North Side Greenhouses, Hartford City, Ind., August 19, 1922.

Enclosed find money order for two more insertions of the asparagus ad. It is doing the work; just received one order for 500.—John B. Trimmer, Hume, Ill., August 18, 1922.

Please discontinue our ad on maidenhair fern, as we are cleaned out.—Simanton & Pence, Falls City, Neb., August 15, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

The Market.

Business is not good, and the trade hopes present conditions will not last much longer. Last week the weather was extremely hot, making it difficult to keep stock any length of time.

Asters and gladioli are dominating the market. The rose crop must now be reckoned with. Growers find it difficult to get the roses to the market in first-class condition, on account of the extreme heat. Columbia and Premier are arriving in quantity and prices are low. Some exceptionally good asters are on the market and have been moving fairly well. Calendulas, scabiosa, blue lace flowers, centaureas, bachelor's buttons, marigolds, Golden Glow, buddleia, physostegia, etc., are arriving daily.

Various Notes.

Miss Alice Hartley, of the Knickerbocker Flower Shop, is back from a two weeks' vacation; she spent part of her time in Buffalo. She reports an enjoyable trip.

The Cleveland Plant & Flower Co. is going to move September 1 to 221 High avenue, next door to the place of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Harrisburg, Pa.—A bill in equity was filed Tuesday, August 15, between H. H. Shumaker and N. F. Stambaugh, complainants, and the Floral Nurseries, Inc., whose property is located at New Kingston, Pa., near here. Following the filing of the bill, the court appointed O. P. Gipple receiver for the company. The complainants are stockholders in the firm and also claim to be creditors. The bill states that the company is indebted on obligations for the amount of approximately $5,000, on liabilities of about $9,800, and on open accounts of about $10,000. According to the bill, suits and legal processes for the collection of the indebtedness have been instituted and threatened, and the corporation is without funds in hand to pay obligations or to raise additional capital. The company was incorporated a year ago under the laws of Delaware, and was authorized to issue preferred stock to the amount of $175,000, and 2,500 shares of common stock without par value. A number of buildings have been erected on the property, and indications are that the company had a fairly good volume of business last spring. Statements have been made to the effect that orders are now being received and contracts executed at a profit. The corporation desires to continue the business; for that reason the appointment of the receiver was requested.

WHITE HYBRID DELPHINIUMS.

Several years ago Wm. Toole, Sr., discovered a plant among some Delphinium Formosum which bore pure white flowers. Since then he has crossed them with choice hybrids and selected from the best of these.

In general habit of growth they are like a good strain of hybrids of the blue color. Some of them are double though most are single, some have dark centers but most are pure white.

The plants we offer have all been selected and marked while in flower and no inferior specimens are sent out.

Price for strong selected plants, carefully packed, 35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100, $225.00 per 1000.

Franklin Park Houses at Boston

It is generally conceded that this is the largest single park range built at one time, devoted solely to the propagating and growing of bedding plants and the housing of decorative palms.

There are ten houses in all, two of which were formerly in Mount Hope Cemetery.
They were built for the City eighteen or twenty years ago.
Our contract called for taking them down and re-erecting them at Franklin Park.

The heating system for the range is gravity steam.

The Park Department advises us that in the coldest weather of last winter, the palm house wing, which is farthest from the boiler, was heated to 65 degrees throughout the night, with but a pound of steam showing on the boilers.

The architects were Haven and Hoyt, who have been retained on many of Boston's important works.

We will gladly furnish you any further particulars, along with interior views of the model work room and greenhouses.

The ornamental palm house sets at an angle to the range, and has a connecting passage to the straight roofed one just back of it.

The entire six, 11-foot, propagating and growing houses are directly joined to a model heal house or potting shed.
From it, the entire range can be reached without going outside.
When you consider that there is a slope of thirteen feet from the front of the palm hous to the last propagating house, you appreciate what some of the building complications were

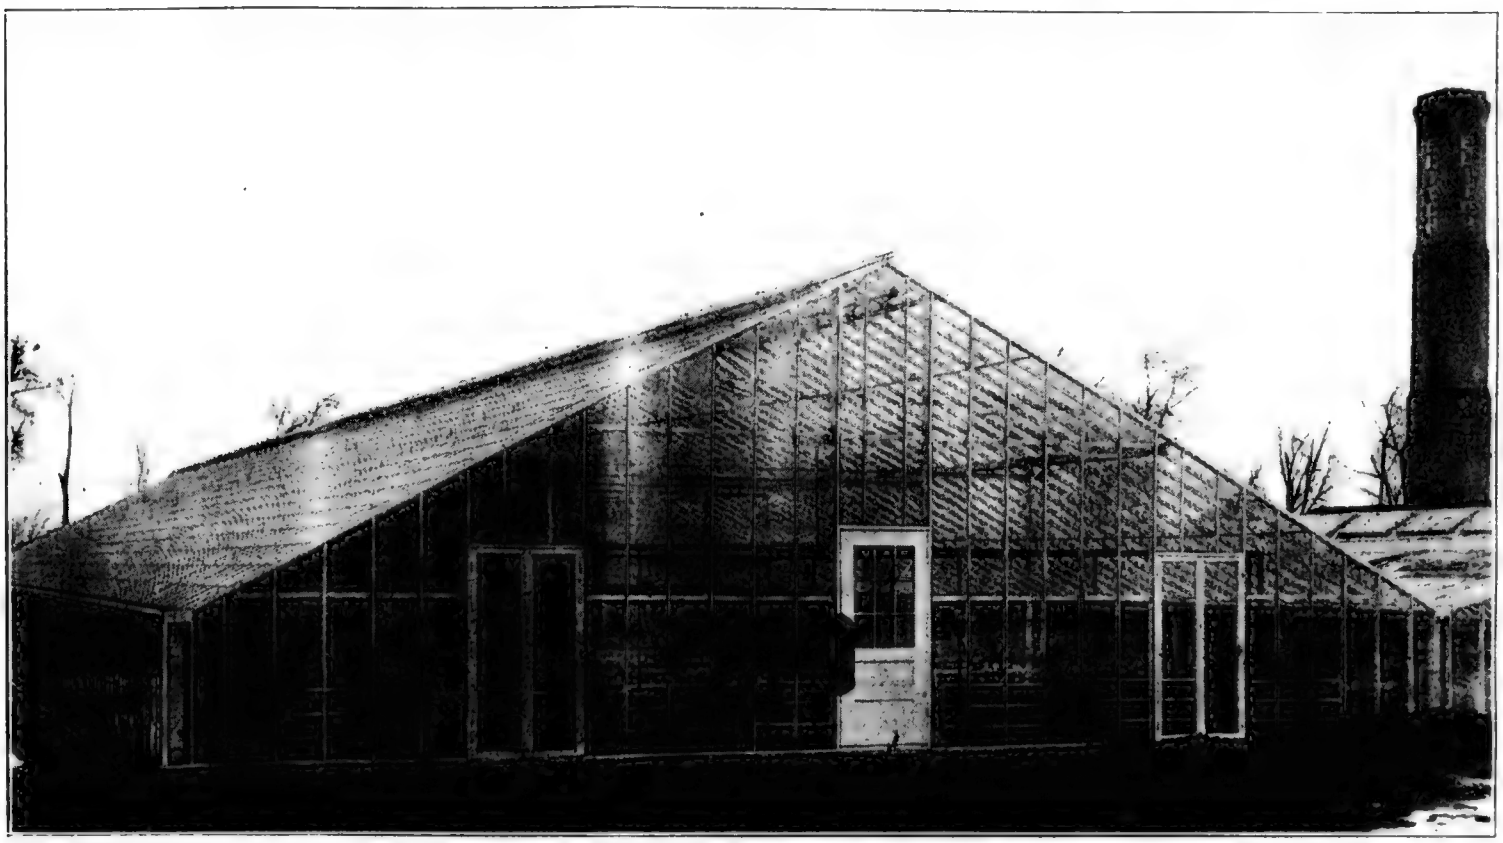
The ornamental palm house sets at an angle to the range, and has a connecting passage to the straight roofed one just back of it.



The curved roof house and the one at its right are the houses we built twenty years ago in Mount Hope Cemetery, and moved here.

The entire six, 11-foot, propagating and growing houses are directly joined to a model heal house or potting shed.
From it, the entire range can be reached without going outside.
When you consider that there is a slope of thirteen feet from the front of the palm hous to the last propagating house, you appreciate what some of the building complications were

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND FOUR

This Makes Clear As Crystal The Difference Between Our Number One and Number Two Construction

The Packard Company, for example, we will say, make a two-ton truck.
They also make a five-ton.
The two-ton has the Packard engine and Packard high grade material throughout.
It differs from the five-ton only that it can carry less.

Our Number Two Construction is for houses up to 40 feet in width.
The Number One for 41 feet and up.
One is no better than the other.
One is not first grade and the other second.
Each is made the best we know how, to best meet the purpose for which it is made.

It would be as ridiculous for us to now build a 30-foot house of our Number Two Construction, as for you to run a five-ton truck when you never carried more than two tons.

The fact that we are able to sell and erect our Number Two for no more than the Semi-Iron costs, is because we have so simplified our manufacturing methods that we can turn out the materials for the Full Iron Frame for much less.
That same simplifying applying to the construction, makes its erection cost fully 10% below the Semi-Iron.
So what you might save on cost of materials on the Semi-Iron, you lose because of its higher erection costs.

We will gladly sell and build for you a Semi-Iron house, but if for the same money you can have a Full Iron Frame, doesn't it seem like mighty sound sense to put your money into the latter?

We have recently mailed to every florist a circular of the Number Two Construction.
If your copy didn't reach you, be sure to let us know and we will promptly send a duplicate.

Our Semi-Iron House has a Wrought Iron Post and the galvanized angle eave plate with roof bar clasps.
But it has no iron rafters. The roof bars with the purlins and columns, have to do all the supporting.
That's why so many columns are necessary.

The Number Two Full Iron Frame has in addition to the Wrought Iron Posts: galvanized angle eave plate and roof bar clasps; an iron rafter that extends from the post to the ridge. It is fastened to the post by a double iron gusset plate.
So strong is this construction that in some of the widths, even including the 40-foot one, it is not necessary to use more than two columns.

The post and rafter of the Number One Construction differ from the Number Two only in the gusset plate being larger, to take care of the added strain on the wider houses, with their necessity of trussings.

Paper White Grandiflora, French Grown

The following is extract from a letter received from our French Representative:—

"We know this—we have been able to give you bulbs at the lowest price which has been paid, giving you merchandise that will flower certainly well. You have received no bulbs of the doubles. All Narcissi sent you have a flower in them. We are sure you will have no complaints from your customers, as they are receiving TRUE GRANDIFLORA, which is the large flower type. We have, like every year, given you bulbs containing good flower centers. The 12 ctm. bulbs are likewise as good. We feel confident that in spite of the bad season and very short crop, you will receive favorable reports from your customers who buy your bulbs."

The well known scarcity of Florists' Bulbs in general suggests, we believe, the advisability of early purchase.

Christmas Lilies, Paper White Narcissus Bulbs

WATER CULTURE IN THE HOUSE

Many varieties of Narcissus bulbs can be used besides Paper Whites. A. M. Kirby in the Book "Daffodils and How to Grow Them" (Doubleday, Page & Co., Publishers, New York), recommends the following for Water Culture in the house or for pot culture. I grow them.

Princeps—Flower of good size, perianth light sulphur, yellow trumpet.

Victoria—Immense flowers of ideal form, forces easily and is earlier than any other high-class bicolor, petals creamy white outside but snowy white inside, bright yellow trumpet, very large and broad, beautifully flanged and frilled at the mouth.

Horsfieldii—Similar to Victoria.

Sir Watkin—One of the best, largest and freest bloomers of the incomparabiles section, very early, flowers five inches across, wide spreading petals are pale yellow, cup bright yellow frequently tinged with orange.

Emperor—Everybody knows the Emperor.

Minnie Hume—Distinct and beautiful, large and broad, pure white petals and a widely expanded pale lemon cup passing to pure white.

Glory of Leiden—A giant seedling resembling but superior to Emperor.

Mme. Plemp—A beautiful bicolor.

Orange Phoenix—Large double flowers, white petals with an orange center.

Sulphur Phoenix—Very large double flowers of white with sulphur colored center.

Mme. de Graaff—A distinct free blooming Leedsii, broad white imbricated petals, broadly expanded cup cream yellow, often suffused with orange or terra cotta, usually bears two flowers to a stem, very effective and highly scented.

Barrii Conspicuus—Queen of the Chalice Cups, strong robust grower and very free bloomer, flowers are large, of refined and beautiful form and splendid substance, lasting in water longer than almost any other Narcissus. Broad soft yellow petals, short wide mouthed, cup of yellow with a distinct rim of orange scarlet.

Poeticus Ornatus—Early free flowering, robust growing variety with large handsome round white petalled flowers and yellow cups brimmed with red, three to four weeks earlier. It forces easily if grown cool.

Why Worry About French Bulbs?

I have large stocks of Barrii Conspicuus and bicolor Victoria and moderate stocks of the other varieties named.

I also grow Paper Whites on a small scale.

I regard any one of the above varieties as the equal if not the superior of Paper Whites for house culture and they may be planted outdoors after they have finished blooming in the house.

Write me for prices and be certain to give me an estimate of the amount of each variety you can use.

Remember Them?

—at the Indianapolis Show

There were 12 of those big fellows, some with 140 flowers on them as big as your head. They all came from here. That Cleveland expert, Lars Anderson, grew them.

We have more of those big ones from the field at $7.50 apiece, and commercial sizes, any amount from 4, 5, 6, 7-inch pots and larger—your favorite variety, by the thousand.

Our last year's stock was very good. Some claimed, "Not a blind shoot in them," and this year's stock looks just as good if not better. No secret in growing them, just common sense. Anderson grows 18,000 and has not enough blind wood for cuttings—got to buy them and buys them here.

Order now and get them shipped as soon as ready, October 1st

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

FOREIGN SUPPLIES REPLACED IN WEST

California is looked to for many plants and bulbs formerly imported from foreign countries. How far the process of replacement has gone is told in this general survey by one perhaps more closely in touch with all the items mentioned grown in California than any other person in the trade.

By W. B. CLARKE.

BEFORE the war the United States imported vast quantities of dye stuffs from Germany. When the war broke out, however, the supply of dye stuffs from Germany was cut off, and the chemists of this country busied themselves about putting an American-made product on the market. Quarantine 37 has acted in a similar manner by excluding from the American markets many foreign-grown plants and bulbs, and the Californians, like the chemists, have set themselves about producing the items which were formerly supplied by foreign growers.

The embargo, as is well known, covers plants, shrubs and trees of almost every kind and nearly all bulbous and tuberous roots. Exceptions are made of certain kinds of bulbs, as well as of some stocks used as a basis for propagation. New varieties in both divisions may be imported under strict regulations, but this does not affect the commercial situation, except as it gives the chance to get started on things that are either new or scarce.

Bulbs Still Admitted.

The bulbs still admitted freely are tulips, narcissi, hyacinths, crocuses, lilies and valley pips, but there are reasons for believing that it is only a question of time before these bulbs will also be excluded. There is at the present time no production on a commercial scale of any of these bulbs in California, with the exception of Paper White narcissi, which are being grown successfully in the Santa Cruz-Watsonville district and to some extent elsewhere. In the Hayward-San Leandro region there is a large acreage of daffodils and other narcissi, but so far this production has been chiefly for the purpose of cut flowers. Here is a potential foundation for a good-sized industry, and bulbs are already being sold from this district. The largest attempt at propagating these bulbs was made at the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, Cal., under the direction of the late Charles Willis Ward. The fact that these bulbs are not now being grown by the firm should not be construed as an indication that the project was a failure. The test in reality was not a fair one. The firm was in such heart-breaking financial difficulties at that time that it was impossible to give the bulbs the attention they required. The work could not be done on time and bulbs were planted, in some instances, months after they should have been in the ground. The weeds were allowed to run rampant and the bulbs were generally "out of luck." Under all of these difficulties, the firm did manage to market some good bulbs, and the general opinion among those who know the real circumstances attending this project is that, had fair conditions prevailed, it is quite likely that the efforts of the firm would have been crowned with success. The entire stock of this firm was sold to an Oregon concern, and the latter has demonstrated its ability to produce tulips fully equal to, if not better than, those produced in Holland. There is no reason to believe that what is being done in Oregon cannot also be done in California.

Holland is not the natural home of the bulbs in the production of which she is so preëminent. The certainty of the weather during the ripening and curing season make conditions in California far more ideal for the growing of bulbs than in Holland. It would also seem that California has a little the advantage over Oregon in this respect. In point of time, the California-grown bulbs are ready much earlier than are the Holland bulbs, and, as for deliveries, the Californians are many weeks ahead of the Holland firms, which means a great deal to the florist who wishes to force the bulbs.

The success which will attend the production of tulips will depend upon the soil conditions. In light soils they tend to multiply rapidly and split up early into planting stock, while for the larger forcing bulbs a heavier soil is found necessary. There are now important stocks in California. Small bulbs are cheap in Holland and there are no restrictions on their importation.

Paper Whites are a success in the Monterey bay region. Importations of these narcissi are made by the millions annually and the home-grown bulbs are not a drop in the bucket. Some complaints have been made regarding the home-grown product, but it is thought that the bulbs used here for propagation were too small. The production of daffodils seems to be on the increase in California, as these multiply well.

Hyacinths.

It is doubtful if there has been any serious attempt made to produce the regular Dutch hyacinths under proper conditions in California. It is entirely probable that nothing will be done with these until importations have ceased, when, of course, the prices will rise enormously and thus make it worth while to grow them. In southern California, Italian Roman hyacinths have been propagated with entire success. Crocuses are entirely too cheap to tempt anyone to enter into their production. As in the case of Dutch hyacinths, the price must be higher to stimulate production here.

Experiments made by Dr. Griffith, of the United States Department of Agriculture, have proved that Japanese Easter lily bulbs can be produced more successfully and in a shorter space of time from seeds than by the usual method of reproduction by multiplication. A small production of lily of the valley pips has been made in Alameda, and it is likely that these could be > Scattered reports are received, from time to time, of individual instances in which stock formerly imported, before the promulgation of quarantine 37, is now being produced in our own country. Many of these are from California. Here is a survey of the entire field, indicating which items have been successfully produced in the Golden state to replace foreign-grown stock, which are still in the experimental stage with a likelihood of success, and which are a long way from realization. If the quarantine is to be continued, these coming supplies from the west will be important to the trade.

grown successfully on the cool coast regions of the north.

Prohibited Bulbs.

Passing now from these bulbs, we will take up those bulbs whose importation has been entirely prohibited, except as a basis for propagation.

In the production of amaryllis, crinums and anemones there is little being done, with the exception of Amaryllis Belladonna, which is widely grown throughout the state. There is a fine demand for the anemones and a grand opportunity for the grower who can produce them. At the present time their production is limited to southern California.

Alstrœmerias, begonias, callas, freesias, gladioli, gloxinias and irises are being produced here with entire success. The alstrœmerias are being grown in the neighborhood of San Francisco and Santa Barbara, while the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, at Eureka, have made a success of propagating tuberous begonias and are shipping them all over the United States. The cultivation of callas is so successful in California that, if any competition from the foreign product existed, it would cut little figure. The heaviest production of this bulb is in the Monterey bay region. To the production of freesias, which has been the most successful among bulb-growing attempts in California, there are devoted at least seventy-five or 100 acres of ground, and it is safe to say that, if the embargo were removed today, the foreign-grown bulbs would not have a look-in. The production of gladioli is extended to almost every state in the union, and here is one place where production will need to be watched. The California production should not extend beyond the demand from the territory west of the Rocky mountains, or there is likely to be overproduction. Gloxinias are produced successfully at Eureka, and the operations are carried on entirely under glass. They are a by-product of azalea culture, as the houses which shelter the azaleas during the winter are used for the gloxinias while the azaleas are in the open ground for the summer season. They are ripened and dug just as the azaleas are ready to come in out of the cold.

Until the embargo went on, there was apparently nothing done in the way of producing Spanish and Dutch irises in California, but the bulbs are now being grown to some extent in southern California and quite heavily in the Monterey bay region. There are large opportunities in the culture of these bulbs, as is shown by their present prices, but it is almost impossible to get further permits from Washington for the importation of propagating stock. Iris tingitana is also being grown quite largely, but its production is somewhat problematical at the present time. Probably its culture will be limited to those regions where experience has shown that it will bloom well, which means in those regions where bulbs are grown for forcing purposes.

Embargo Hits Plants.

The embargo spared some of the bulbs, but it has made a clean sweep of plants. In previous years some of these plants were imported heavily, others not at all, and it is the former class which interests us here. The salient feature of the whole matter is that all of the plants which the embargo excluded from the markets of this country can be grown successfully in California, and California growers have already made a good start in the way of producing them commercially. Some of the outstanding examples of what California growers are doing in the way of growing plants are as follows: Araucarias, aspidistras, azaleas, boxwoods, kentias, rhododendrons and roses.

Of the araucarias, Eureka has the only good stock of mother plants in the state and is now propagating them in pretty good quantities. Most of the present production is being retained for further production and it is thought that about 10,000 will be produced next year.

Several large importations have been made of aspidistras for propagating purposes. There are a few growers who have never heard of growing aspidistras from the seeds, but E. H. Rust, of South Pasadena, has several hundred fine seedlings to prove that this can be done.

Azaleas have been and are now being produced at Eureka. The annual production at Eureka of these plants amounts to about 30,000 grafted plants and about 20,000 own-root of the indica type. The production of these plants cannot be increased without increasing the glass area and ten times the amount of glass area could not produce a sufficient quantity to meet the demand. In addition to this, there are being produced at Eureka 30,000 azaleas of the Kurume type, which includes the well known Hinodigiri.

Boxwoods Are Coming.

Enormous numbers of boxwoods were formerly imported, but it is quite likely that California will soon begin to supply the eastern market with this item. Eureka now has 250,000 plants from 1 to 4 years old and there is an assured annual production of at least 75,000 plants, both pyramids and globes. There are also some good blocks around San Francisco. In southern California, Roy F. Wilcox has gone into the production of these plants in the Japanese variety, which is of more rapid growth than sempervirens and has greater heat and drought-resisting qualities.

California was producing kentias to some extent before the embargo came on, and propagation is now proceeding on an enormous scale in southern California. Bassett & Washburn report over one million plans; Roy F. Wilcox & Co., 300,000 plants, while the Santa Barbara growers report about 30,000 plants. Some trouble was experienced at first with these plants, because they were not properly established before they were sent out, but growers now thoroughly understand the importance of allowing the plants to become properly established before they are allowed to leave the ranges, and no more trouble is looked for from this score. Kentia growing alone is an industry of some import.

At the present time rhododendrons are produced only at Eureka and propagation activities are hampered by the lack of seedlings on which to graft the desired varieties. It is thought that with the present equipment the annual production of this plant will be about 30,000.

Roses Largely Grown.

California is producing over 3,000,000 rose plants every year, divided among budded and own-root stock. Most of the budded plants are grown in the San Jose district, where Manetti is used almost exclusively as a stock. The district alone has an annual production of over 2,000,000 plants. Howard & Smith, at Los Angeles, also propagate entirely by budding, but use as a stock the Gloire de Rosomanes, more commonly known as Ragged Robin, which has been found superior under our climatic conditions. Roses on their own roots are grown almost entirely in southern California. There are three principal growers, with a combined output of doubtless over a million plants annually. The San Jose district is also commencing to grow Manetti stocks for grafting to replace those at present imported. It could easily supply the entire demand, as these are grown from the tip wood, which is discarded in making up budding stocks, but prices are not attractive except when there is a scarcity abroad. Of course, roses are grown in the eastern states, but these are only the hardy varieties, such as hybrid perpetuals. In teas and the all-important hybrid teas, California has practically no competition to fear.

Among the things for which there is a heavy market with no adequate production in California may be mentioned conifers of many kinds, lilacs for forcing, astilbes or florists' spiræas, bay trees, English laurel, deciduous magnolias, Japanese maples and last, but by no means least, camellias and daphnes, which offer another remarkable opportunity—with a heavy demand and no supply.

COMPLETING A NURSERY.

Progress at Rock's Gardens.

To purchase a tract of 133 acres, prepare for cultivation and plant sixty acres of it within two years, and at the same time produce grounds as attractive as a show place as they are valuable in production, is a feat that is scarcely to be paralleled. One who takes an automobile ride out from Kansas City beyond the little town of Independence to Rock's Flower Gardens finds it hard to believe that three years ago the hillside now covered by decorative nursery stock and perennials was an unbroken tract. The entire place shows such care and such precision of arrangement that one cannot but estimate the sums of money invested here, with faith in the future, before a single dollar was taken out. Such an enterprise demanded foresight, notable executive capacity and a stanch faith in the results to be achieved. These are, however, characteristics of William L. Rock, whose splendid retail flower store in the downtown district of Kansas City shows faith that a large body of customers will produce a tremendous volume of business month after month, in order to maintain so fine an establishment. The greenhouses on the edge of town, which furnish some of the flowers sold here, bespeak the same traits. But the real manifestation of them is at the nursery establishment known as Rock's Flower Gardens.

In the last few years it has been apparent to every enterprising nurseryman and florist that the demand for perennials and for ornamental nursery stock was far in excess of the supply and would likely continue so for a considerable period, since a stock of this material, in the best grade, is not one which could be worked up with great rapidity. Understanding this, William L. Rock purchased the tract of 133 acres just outside Independence, Mo., and proceeded to develop it along unusual lines. He laid it out as a show place, and the long drive by which automobiles enter is lined with plantings of cannas bordered with petunias, perennial salvias and the like. The thirty-odd acres of perennials are planted in long rows, each of which is plainly marked with the name on a white stake, large enough so the most ignorant floriculturally can read the names easily. The remainder of the present sixty acres planted is in shrubs and other ornamentals.

This work was not done without expert assistance. As manager of the gardens, John Valkenberg is deserving of high credit for their appearance. Mr.

Valkenberg is known as one of the best propagators in the country. He came to America from Holland, seventeen years ago, and for fifteen years was manager of the nursery department of Vaughan's, at Western Springs, Ill. When Mr. Rock established the gardens, he sought for the best in the way of a manager and was successful in his search.

While Mr. Rock, as president, is the executive head of the establishment, his son and a chum of the latter form the active business management. Lawrence Rock is treasurer and Wiley Pendleton, secretary; both are graduates of the University of Missouri. The vice-president is H. R. Hemphill. The younger Rock has worked hard at the gardens in the two years that they have been established, and the results achieved in this short time indicate a notable success in store for this undertaking. The views on pages 22 and 23 indicate but slightly what is to be seen at Rock's Flower Gardens. One cannot see from them the rows of phlox in splendid condition, the privets that are a delight to the eyes, and the many other items, too long a list to be detailed, which show what care is prevalent here and what effort has been put upon the tasks that face the inaugurators of this enterprise.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Registration.

The following rose has been offered for registration by the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., and passed upon by the registration committee of the American Rose Society:

Humboldt, instead of Eureka, as per notice of July 22; class, hybrid tea; parentage, unnamed seedling x Ophelia; habit, erect growth, throwing long, straight stems; character of foliage, somewhat similar to Ophelia; freedom of growth and hardiness, free and hardy; color, bright rose pink; form, long-pointed bud, outside petals recurved; fragrance and bud, slightly fragrant; petalage, medium full; freedom of bloom and lasting quality, remarkably free bloomer. The rose is similar to Chatenay except darker in color and superior for the following reason: Much stronger grower than Chatenay.

If no objection to such registration is filed with the secretary of the society within three weeks after this publication, the registration will become permanent. John C. Wister, Sec'y.

ROSE MIDGE.

Will you kindly give me what information you can regarding the rose midge and its extermination?

W. R.—Ill.

The rose midge is an exceedingly difficult pest to destroy. The adult is a small, yellowish fly, about one-twenty-fifth of an inch in length. The eggs are deposited beneath the sepals of the flower buds or between the folded leaves of the leaf buds. The eggs hatch in about two days, and the young maggots feed upon the tissues of the undeveloped leaves and flowers. The larvæ become full-grown in about a week and drop to the soil, where they pupate, and in about another week they emerge as adult flies. The maggots are present in injurious numbers from June to October or November, but are most troublesome, as a rule, during June and July. They probably pass the winter in the soil.

Since the rose is the only plant attacked by this insect, the most certain way to get rid of it is to plant the infested houses with some other crop for a year. When the roses are replanted, care should be taken that clean plants are obtained, from a district where the midge is not prevalent. If it is not desired to rotate crops, the houses may be thoroughly cleaned in midwinter, and during December and January, when the pupæ are in the soil, all the plants should be removed and destroyed and the soil completely changed. As a further precaution, any rubbish beneath the benches should be removed and the floors of the benches thoroughly sprayed with some insecticide such as a twenty per cent kerosene emulsion. Although the above operations are expensive, nevertheless they undoubtedly pay when greenhouses have become infested with this pest. Fumigation with hydrocyanic gas is of benefit when done early in March, to kill the emerging flies of the first generation and while the growth of the maggots is slow. In summer this treatment is less effective, as the gas cannot be used oftener than every two or three days without damage to the plants, and in these intervals many of the flies have an opportunity to emerge and deposit eggs. The gas is not sufficient to kill the maggots, which are well protected within the buds, unless used at such a strength that injury to the plants will result. In addition to fumigation, the plants should be gone over every day and the infested buds cut off and burned.

SOIL FOR POTTING ROSES.

I have some dormant roses, Dorothy Perkins and Baby Rambler, coming along. Would a good top soil and well rotted sheep manure make a good potting soil for them? P. G.—Mich.

Good top soil, preferably from a pasture, with one-fourth well rotted sheep manure, will make a suitable compost for the roses. It would be a good idea to mix the compost some time before you intend using it. Decayed sod is better than loam from the field or garden, but the latter will answer if no other is available. C. W.

ROSES FOR BEGINNERS.

I desire to grow a few roses in one of my houses, perhaps fifty of three different colors. What three kinds would you recommend as being most safely tried by a beginner? Would it be best to partition off the part of the house where the roses are grown?

B. L. E.—Pa.

A beginner will not go wrong in growing Premier, for deep pink; Columbia, for light pink, and Double White Killarney, for white. These are popular varieties and among the easiest to grow. Whether it is advisable to partition off the section in which the roses are to be grown depends upon the temperature at which you carry your house. If the house is carried at a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, we see no reason for putting up a partition.

POTTED RAMBLERS FOR SPRING.

We wish to force some rambler roses for next Easter and Mothers' day. Will you kindly mention some of the best varieties to grow and describe their culture? We have ordered some 2-year-old, field-grown stock from a nurseryman. Is that the right kind of stock to use? When should the plants be potted and what size of pots should be used?

S. F. C.—O.

The 2-year field-grown plants should be good stock for the purpose and will probably require 7-inch or 8-inch pots. If, as is customary, the plants are delivered by the nurseryman in the fall, they should be potted as soon as received, pruned more or less, according to the rankness of their growth, and placed in a cool house, shed, pit or cellar, there to remain until new roots have begun to form and the top growth is ready to start.

As soon as enough of the Christmas stock has been sold to vacate the needed bench space, the rose plants intended for Easter sales should be moved to a warmer house. The start in forcing should not occur later, at any rate, than the first day or two of the new year. Since at least twelve weeks of treatment in this house will be required to bring the first lot of plants into bloom without undue forcing, and since the date of next Easter is unusually early, April 1, it is apparent that there will not be a superabundance of time for getting the Easter plants ready. As to the plants for Mother's day, the forcing of them may, of course, begin much later, not only because six weeks' more time will be at command, but because the plants will naturally advance much faster as the bright spring days approach.

Stakes should be used and the canes will "break" into bud more uniformly if not trained up straight, but twisted or wound, to some extent, around the stakes. The early stages of forcing should be as gradual as time will permit. The temperature, decidedly moderate at first—perhaps not more than 45 to 50 degrees at night—may be gradually raised to 60 degrees at night. In other particulars the treatment of these ramblers does not differ greatly from ordinary rose culture. The plants should be allowed plenty of room. When the buds begin to show, if not sooner, some liquid stimulant, will be beneficial, but this feeding should not be continued after the flowers open, or it will detract from their color.

It is difficult to suggest a selection of varieties, since a long list would be confusing and almost useless, while a short list, however good, would be sure to omit other equally choice kinds. Among the dwarf or bush sorts, these are popular: Baby Rambler, Baby Tausendschoen, Echo, Ellen Poulsen, Erna Teschendorff, George Elger, Jessie, Mrs. W. H. Cutbush, Triomphe d'Orleans, Phyllis, Baby Dorothy and Clothilde Soupert. Among the taller varieties, or climbers, these are favorites: Tausendschoen, Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha and Excelsa.

SAWFLY LARVÆ ON ROSES.

They are easy to control. Knocking them from the bush with a stream of water is a simple remedy. Since they eat the leaf tissue, thoroughly spraying the leaves with a stomach poison, such as three rounded teaspoonfuls of powdered arsenate of lead to one gallon of water, whenever the larvæ begin to appear, will kill them and thus prevent the injury.

If only one generation of the insect occurs, as in the European rose slug, one or two sprayings should effect control, but if there are more than one generation, as with the coiled rose worm and the bristly rose slug, a closer watch will have to be kept upon the bushes and spraying done more frequently.

The foliage of roses is frequently attacked by sawfly larvæ, which feed upon the leaves and cause the bushes to become unsightly and weakened. Three common species of sawfly larvæ are found on roses in many parts of the United States east of the Rocky mountains.

WHITE HYBRID DELPHINIUMS.

In a recent issue of The Review was an inquiry as to where to obtain white delphiniums. Probably the best known white delphinium in this country, outside of the Chinese variety, which lacks hardiness, is Delphinium Moerheimei, which is a white, seedless form of D. Belladonna. Frequently odd stalks of Moerheimei come forth with the true sky-blue color of D. Belladonna. Being seedless, it is comparatively slow of propagation, and importations, originally depended on, are now impossible.

Several years ago William Toole, Sr., of Baraboo, Wis., found a white delphinium among some Delphinium formosum seedlings. It looked so promising that seeds were carefully saved and planted. Many of these came true to color, but seemed somewhat small. The best of these white seedlings were crossed with choice blue hybrids and the best of the seedlings of these were again selected. In general habit of growth these white hybrids are like a good strain of a blue color. The flowers are medium in size, but the plants are vigorous in growth and compare favorably with any good strain of hybrids. Some of the plants have double flowers, though most are single. A few of the white flowers have a distinct black center, but most of them are pure white. At present, only a little over half of the seedlings come pure white, the rest ranging from a curious grayish color through various shades of blue.

William Toole, Sr., and a Plant of His New White Delphinium.

While a pure white delphinium will never be so popular as are the blue ones in the hardy garden, they have an important place in affording variety and contrast in a group of delphiniums.

INSTALLING WATER PUMP.

I have a range of about 35,000 feet of glass. I intend to install a pressure tank and an electric pump for my water supply. How large a tank is it advisable to install to meet the requirements of the above-mentioned range, with an additional 10,000 feet? How large should the pump be?

R. G. G.—Mich.

The capacity of the pump will be determined by the height the water has to be raised, as well as by the amount of water required and the pressure to be maintained. The larger the tank the smaller may be the capacity of the pump.

For a place of the size mentioned, we would use a pump having a capacity for supplying as much water as will be likely to be needed during any period, and when such a pump is provided, we should not consider it necessary to provide a tank with a capacity of more than 100 barrels. This would store approximately sixty-five barrels of water.

While it is not likely that more than 100 gallons per minute will be needed for watering a place of this size, we suggest that a pump with a capacity of 150 gallons per minute be provided. The pump should be able to maintain a pressure of fifty pounds. A pump that will work automatically would then be able to keep the pressure at any point desired and without attention.

VEGETABLE GROWERS ELECT.

Also Adopt Slogan.

Following an address by S. W. Severance, at the convention of the Vegetable Growers of America, at Indianapolis last week, in which he outlined the main details of the publicity plan proposed for the organization, the slogan, "Eat Vegetables for Vitamines," was adopted, the plan endorsed, and a resolution carried to assess each local organization $100 to finance the project. The recommendation of the slogan and the publicity plan in the address of President Louis F. Miller was reported in the account of the convention opening which appeared in last week's issue of The Review.

New officers elected by the association are:

President—H. F. Thompson, Arlington, Mass.

Vice-president—A. H. MacLennen, Guelph, Ont.

Secretary—C. H. Missley, New Brunswick, N. Y.

Treasurer—H. J. Cheney, Grand Rapids, Mich.

The secretary and the treasurer were reëlected.

Closing Festivities.

The closing event of the convention was the banquet at the Claypool hotel,

Thursday evening, August 24, but the biggest feature of the entertainment program was the automobile tour the day before, made in 136 automobiles. On this tour the visitors inspected the factory of the Van Camp's Products Co., the truck gardens of Henry Hohlts and Peaper Bros., and Columbia park, where supper was served.

In retrospect it was considered one of the most successful of the conventions of the Vegetable Growers of America, and the adoption of a publicity campaign, embodying the slogan mentioned above, is believed by many to mark a turning point in the history of the organization.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

"Like peas in a pod," observed August Hirshkorn, of Beckert's Seed Store, Pittsburgh, Pa., referring to the splendid manner in which the Indianapolis organization of market gardeners worked with the Vegetable Growers of America on the occasion of the convention last week. The final event was the banquet at the Claypool hotel, Thursday evening, August 24. But the biggest social success was the tour Wednesday afternoon, made in 136 cars and considered to be the best turnout seen in Indianapolis for many moons. The privilege of driving over the famous motor speedway was a delight to the speeders. It was a sensation to all. Then came a visit to the Van Camp Products Co., where an appetite was created to be appeased at the garden of Henry Hohlts. On again went the visitors to Peaper Bros., where the Skinner system of irrigation and various makes of tractors were demonstrated. Then they went to Columbia park, where a really substantial supper was served. Just at this time Jupiter Pluvius did some sprinkling. The rain was welcomed and it raised the spirits of all.

As the cavalcade of market gardeners passed the flower store of the A. Wiegand's Sons Co., Homer Wiegand called for three cheers for those who not only cater to the wants of the inner man, but brighten thousands of homes by the immense quantities of outdoor flowers sold through the markets. "Funeral work has been our main business of late," he commented. George Wiegand is on his way home from the Yellowstone region.

* * * *

"Too busy putting in the last batch of poinsettia cuttings," replied A. F. J. Baur, of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, "or we should have been along. We realize that the vegetable growers are closely allied to the carnationists, for these vocations are both stepping stones. One advantage in growing carnations is that they can be grown a second year, as seen by these beds of carried-over plants." They surely are in perfect health and the earliest in crop. The newly planted stock of Enchantress, Supreme, Super-Supreme, Laddie, Ruth Baur, Rosalia and Red Rosalia, Harvester and Maine Sunshine lead the select list of commercial kinds. Chrysanthemums look promising, both in the 2 and 3-year-old seedlings. A leader in the final test is a white of the Turner strain. There is also a reflexed bronze and a large yellow, an improved Lena Baur. The general run of stock is fully up to the usual high standard. Begonia Chatelaine, hydrangeas, amaryllis and poinsettias were seen in seemingly endless numbers, for propagating began as soon as the last batch of carnation cuttings were rooted and ended with the batch sanded August 23. These make the small plants for fern dishes and the like at Christmas.

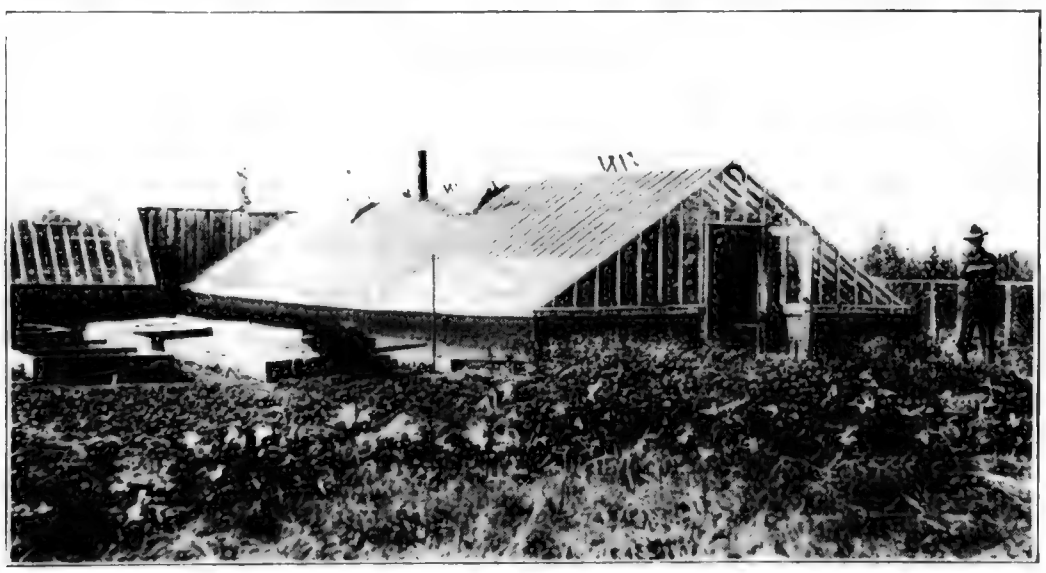
* * * *

David Weller, of the William Walker Co., Louisville, Ky., called attention to a vase of Rose Angelus, which has been tested for staging qualities. At the end of ten days the blooms could be used in funeral work, the foliage being as green as when first cut. William Walker, who has grown Kaiserin many years, speaks highly of Angelus as an all-year-around variety. Bouvardia Humboldtii flourishes here grown outside all summer, being useful for bridal bouquets.

* * * *

"Proud to be the oldest member in the trade here and the first to install the Brunswick-Kroeschell system of cold storage," observed William Walker, of the William Walker Co., Louisville, Ky., referring to the opening in a few days of the firm's new store, which will have a cold storage box on the left-hand side toward the rear; this will also supply the showcase at the front of the store. A single window, with white tiling, affords a fine view of the store, 19x75 feet, with a mezzanine floor. The decoration of the store is under the supervision of Mrs. Walker and will embody the latest ideas in general effect. Stock at the greenhouses is of quality consistent with the new environment.

* * * *



The Jacob Schulz Co., Louisville, Ky., has the familiar mill pond scene in its window. There is nothing more suggestive of summer calm, especially when well studied out, as it is here. Dahlias will soon be seen, as the field is said to be in fine shape, with small danger of frost.

* * * *

The F. Walker Co., Louisville, Ky., has had a run of funeral work, especially acceptable at a time when outdoor flowers are plentiful.

Edith V. Walker & Bros., Louisville, Ky., report a great deal of funeral work; this is fortunate when outdoor flowers are in quantity. W. M.

Proving That Everything Is Not Ice and Snow in Alaska.

FARTHEST NORTH.

The representative of the S. A. F. who holds the record for farthest north in the matter of location is Frank Teufel, who is vice-president for Alaska. Mr. Teufel is proprietor of the Nenana Gardens, at Nenana, Alaska. Mr. Teufel is shown in the illustration below on this page just as he is at work in the "Land of the Midnight Sun." This illustration, showing part of the Nenana Gardens, amply demonstrates that all is not ice and snow in our northern territory. Mr. Teufel is quite emphatic that it is not. He says:

"Our floricultural field is quite small here in Alaska. One might think that the reason for this is because climatic conditions are unfavorable. Quite the contrary. One who has never visited Alaska cannot believe how wonderful is the summer climate which we have up here, especially in the interior. During the month of June it is practically daylight all the time. The sun only sets for a few hours on these long days, and for this reason everything naturally grows quite rapidly. Garden truck matures in one-third less time than it takes to mature in the United States proper."

At the present time, says Mr. Teufel, almost all greenhouse space is confined to forcing vegetables. The demand for cut flowers and plants is naturally limited, but Mr. Teufel believes that more business in this line will be done in the near future.

"With the completion of the government railroad this year," he says, "which is being built to develop this great interior country, there is every reason to believe that Alaska will come into its own. This is by no means a land of ice and snow, as some people have pictured it—far from it. I would suggest to anyone who thinks of icebergs when Alaska is mentioned that he take a trip through this country sometime. I am sure it would be worth his while."

Mr. Teufel remarks, in closing an interesting letter, "The Review is a lifesaver for us isolated florists. I would not go without mine for any price."

NEWARK, N. J.

Florists here report that business has increased since August 1, and that conditions are good for the summer season. Asters are arriving in larger quantities. Gladioli are plentiful. Fine early yellow mums will make their appearance soon.

Charles Luthy has moved his store from 363 Springfield avenue to 347 Bergen street, just around the corner.

Mrs. Gahr, 312 Springfield avenue, reports business good for August.

STARTING THE BULBS

PAPER WHITE NARCISSI.

Paper White narcissi are certainly among the most useful and dependable of forcing bulbs and may be flowered over a long season. If wanted, they can easily be had early in November, but while chrysanthemums are at their height the demand for other flowers is somewhat feeble and, ordinarily, it is better to hold them until nearer Thanksgiving. They can be held until the end of March, if necessary, by which time other bulbous flowers crowd them out. Paper Whites may be bench-grown successfully, but if they are not to be wholesaled, it is far better to plant them in flats four inches deep. Do not plant all the bulbs as soon as they are received, but plant them in batches the same as freesias, to insure a longer and more regular succession. Stand them in a coldframe or even outdoors after boxing and, when watered, give them a mulch of half-decayed leaves or hay to prevent drying out. The batches can be placed in the heat every ten days and, to economize space, they start splendidly below the benches.

NARCISSUS SOLEIL D'OR.

While Paper Whites are far the most popular of the early-flowering narcissi, they come in but one color. A good-sized fortune awaits the man who can produce pink, yellow or blue narcissi. Such colors as these will undoubtedly be produced some day. The main criticisms heard concerning Paper Whites are that they are all white and possess a strong odor. Some people like the fragrance; to others it is most objectionable, and to recommend Soleil d'Or for a change seems like adding insult to injury, for the latter variety, while yellow in color, has an even more decided fragrance than the Paper Whites. The call for this yellow narcissus is less than that for Paper Whites, but it will pay rural florists to grow a moderate-sized batch of it, especially as it is an early bloomer. There are others of the polyanthus narcissus section, like the well known Grand Monarque, well worth growing. These have more vigor than the Paper Whites and they have a pleasing variation in white and yellow shades of color.

TRUMPET MAJORS AND SPURS.

Efforts are made each year to flower trumpet daffodils and tulips for Christmas, so-called "prepared" bulbs being used. On the whole, I doubt if there is any money in these Christmas bulbs. A large proportion of them usually come blind and a proportion of those that do flower are short-stemmed. Still, customers always ask for them at the holidays, and to satisfy this demand a good many growers try each year to flower a few. The French Trumpet majors and Golden Spurs arrive ahead of the Holland bulbs and force better. Anyone wanting early flowers should procure a few of these, rather than waste efforts in trying to rush the Dutch bulbs, which do not respond at all readily to early forcing. It will hardly pay to plant many of these bulbs, but a small batch which can be flowered for the holidays will prove to be a decided and always welcome novelty.

LILIUM HARRISII.

The time was when growers were all but dependent upon Lilium Harrisii as a forcing lily for Easter. Some thirty years ago splendid stock of this handsome lily used to come from Bermuda; then came disease, and growers and shippers so discouraged buyers that Harrisii got a black eye and the Japanese longiflorums gradually gained the ascendancy, a position which they still retain. More careful culture and the gradual elimination of disease in Bermuda has given us once more the clean and thrifty stock, and, where some extra early flowers are desired, no mistake will be made in planting Harrisii. The amount of stock available is comparatively small, however, and early ordering will be necessary to secure it.

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

CALLAS.

By this time callas should have been started up. If you need new tubers order them now and you would do well to purchase some of the Godfrey, which is far more free-blooming than the old type, botanically known as Richardia æthiopica. Callas flower continuously under glass from October until June and may be grown in a variety of ways. One or two large growers plant them in solid beds entirely; others use benches; not a few use boxes, but far the greatest number plant them in pots. In pots and boxes my experience has been that rather more flowers are produced in mid-winter, when prices are best, but benches and beds give tremendous crops of larger flowers as the days start to lengthen. Callas may be grown successfully in 6-inch, 7-inch or 8-inch pots. I use a single tuber in a 6-inch pot and two or three each in the larger-sized pots. The compost must be a generous one; two-thirds loam from a pasture, one-third old well dried cow or horse manure and some sharp sand make a good potting medium. A good dash of fine bone may also be advantageously added. When the pots are well filled with roots, a top-dressing of bone can be given every week or ten days and the roots will devour it greedily. If any of the tubers you have show decay, be sure to cut off all such spots. To increase your stock, it will pay to fill a few flats with the smaller-sized tubers. They will develop into nice flowering stock for the following season.

LILIUM CANDIDUM.

Bulbs of Lilium candidum, a beautiful and useful lily, the most immaculate of the entire family, usually come to hand during the month of August. The only stock worth growing comes from northern France, though some comes from the south of France. Turkish and Italian-grown bulbs also come here. These are larger and flatter than the true northern type, and produce narrower leaves and much smaller blooms; in fact, they are not worth growing. Candidum lilies are reported rather a short crop and the prices continue to ascend yearly. There is no reason why we could not produce excellent bulbs here, but no one as yet seems to have troubled about them. For the country florist this is not the variety to grow as an Easter pot plant; the larger-flowered longiflorum forms are dwarfer and better, but for a rather late Easter, pots of candidums well grown will far outclass any longiflorums. From a single bulb in a pot they do not appeal to me, but in 8-inch or 10-inch pots, several bulbs in each, they are superb.

L. candidum is unlike other lilies in that it produces a rosette of leaves in summer, which remain over winter even outdoors, and it will be noted that no matter how early we receive the bulbs, they have started to make leaves and roots. Therefore, unpack the bulbs and pot them at once; place some sand below and over the bulbs; stand the pots outdoors in full sun; do not water them until the soil has dried out, and protect them from drenching rains in the early stages of growth. Keep them outdoors until they have had several good freezes; then stand them in a coldframe. Cover them with dry leaves as severe weather approaches, and do not start them until mid-December or later. In forcing, a minimum of 50 degrees should not be exceeded; these bulbs will not stand hard forcing, like L. formosum or L. giganteum. For altar decorations at Easter, candidums are much superior to any other white lilies. They are also much in demand for weddings and are excellent for many other purposes. After being cut they should not be thrown away, but planted outdoors, where they will bloom in June or early July of the following season. For outdoor culture, L. candidum should be planted only four inches deep. Roll the bulbs in sulphur and plant them partly on their sides, covering them with sand. They are beautiful associated with hardy larkspurs, blooming at the same time.

Sweet Peas

SOWING WINTER CROP.

The popular sweet peas fill a larger part each year in our flower markets. The proportion of outdoor-grown flowers is small compared with those produced under glass and the quality of the best greenhouse peas is distinctly ahead of the open-air ones in quality, if we except a limited number grown outdoors on private estates for exhibition purposes. The sweet pea outdoors is an uncertain article, except in certain favored sections near the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, but under glass we are fairly sure of a good crop from fall until early summer, except that during spells of dark, damp and cold weather there may be a heavy bud drop, if the houses are kept too cold and the atmosphere is too close.

Any time during August sweet peas can be sown for a fall or winter crop. The seed may be started in sand, potted off and later planted out in rows, or, as in many cases is done, it can be thinly sown where the plants are to remain. Good sweet pea seed comes high and, for the sake of seed economy, I prefer either planting out the seedlings from sand or potting off the seedings and, as soon as they are nicely rooted, planting them out. Do not grow sweet peas unless you have ample head room and unless you can command a minimum temperature of 48 degrees to 50 degrees at night. The rows should not be closer than four feet apart and five feet is better. Varieties are numerous. Bright pink always is in best demand; white and lavender come next, while scarlet, blue, orange, maroon and other shades have but a limited call. Good, moderately priced sorts are: Pink, Yarrawa, Rose Queen, Gorgeous and Zvolanek's Rose; white, White Orchid, Madonna, Snowstorn; lavender, Asta Ohn, Lavender King; Glitters is a lovely orange-scarlet; Morning Star, rosy salmon, and Blue Bird, deep blue.

SWEET PEAS IN OHIO.

Man is a social being. The gregarious instinct is strong, indeed, in the human being. To compete with or cooperate with the other fellow is as natural to man as is to him the eating of his daily meal. Every man knows that if he wishes to progress, he must seek the truths that other men have learned and give in return those which he has discovered. He must contribute his share to the common fund of knowledge if he wishes to collect his dividend.

The Lampert Floral Co., of Xenia, O., the largest growers of sweet peas in the Greene county district of Ohio, is operated by a group of live-wire men who are always willing to "swap" tales on growing sweet peas. The firm has two greenhouses, 40x200 feet, devoted entirely to sweet peas, and one of the members of this firm says about growing sweet peas as follows: "We plant our sweet peas in the ground beds the middle of August. The soil is well watered before the planting is done. When the soil has dried out sufficiently again, the seeds are sown. They are then watered slightly and a day or two afterward the soil is raked a little, in order to hold the moisture. We do not water the seedlings again until they have reached a height of about one inch. The houses are kept shaded if the weather is hot. We tie our peas up with white string about ten or twelve feet above the ground and pick them with a step ladder, if they cannot be reached any other way. We grow only the best and latest proven commercial varieties. We plant our peas in ground beds that are 200 feet in length and five feet wide, running four rows parallel to the length of the benches. If the plants come too thick, we pinch some of them back.

"We should like much, indeed, to see something on the culture of sweet peas by some of the other growers throughout the country in the columns of The Review, as it is only by comparing notes with others in the trade that we can eliminate all excess and unnecessary movements and do our best."

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

McNutt & Crouch Co., authorized capital $50,000, is preparing to open one of the largest and best equipped flower stores in the south, at Gay and Church streets. The interested parties are C. W. Henderson, of Henderson Seed Co.; A. J. McNutt, for years in the business here, and Brockway Crouch, who has had a wide experience in the trade, including terms of employment with Z. D. Blackistone, in Washington, and Breitmeyer's, in Detroit. He also was the former proprietor of the C. W. Crouch greenhouses here. A contract has been made with A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, for the fitting up of the new store, which will be opened in a few weeks.

HOOSIERS TO MEET.

The September meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held Thursday, September 7, at 7:30 p. m., with the Smith & Young Co. Those so desiring can make their plans to attend the state fair during the day and the meeting in the evening. Refreshments will be served.

VEGETABLE FORCING

LETTUCE CULTURE.

We should like to grow lettuce for Thanksgiving and Christmas. How long does it take to grow it in the greenhouse? When shall we plant it in order to have it for either of the above-mentioned days? We have had a great deal of experience in growing flowers, but the trade here wants lettuce.

N. S. G.—Ind.

Presuming that you have a suitable house for lettuce culture and can command a minimum temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night, there is no reason why you cannot grow good lettuce. Solid beds are better than raised benches, but the latter can be used to good advantage, especially in midwinter. Lettuce requires a rich soil, as do all leafy vegetable crops. You can grow either leaf or head lettuce; the last-named is preferable. Good varieties are May King, French Unrivaled and Big Boston. These will require a good soil, containing plenty of stable manure, and for successive plantings you must add more manure. If you cannot get stable manure, pulverized sheep manure will make a good substitute. Good hardwood ashes and fine bone are useful as commercial fertilizers, but you cannot get good lettuce by depending upon them alone. This crop needs a great deal of humus in the soil, and repeated applications of stable manure have proved the best form of plant food.

For a Thanksgiving crop, sow the seeds early in September, and for Christmas two weeks later. If you prefer leaf lettuce, Grand Rapids Forcing is a good variety. Lettuces succeed best where they have had one transplanting before being placed in their permanent quarters, and if you have a generous depth of soil on ground beds, a good soaking at planting time should carry the crop to maturity. Surface stirrings of the soil are, of course, necessary. Constant watering is harmful and will cause rot. If you grow your lettuce in benches or solid beds without much depth, more watering will be necessary. Careful ventilation is also necessary to prevent scalding of the edges of the leaves.

ONIONS FROM SEEDS OR SETS?

Is it best to grow onions from the seed rather than from the sets? If sets are the best means of propagation, what varieties should one use?

A. E. W.—Minn.

If the onions are to be grown under glass, it would be advisable to plant the yellow or white sets, which are also the best for an early outdoor crop. For the larger, winter-storing onions, the plants should be propagated from the seeds, and there is no better all-around variety than the Yellow Danvers. If you have a market for large onions, sow the seeds of any of the largebulbed varieties under glass early in February and prick out the seedlings, when they are well hardened, in rich soil six inches apart in the rows, with twelve to fifteen inches between the rows for hand cultivation. If you intend to use a horse for cultivating them, the rows must be made wide enough to permit the cultivator to pass through them. Cut the tops back at planting-out time. Prizetaker and Ailsa Craig are large onions for transplanting in this way. While pricked out seedlings will produce immense bulbs, they do not keep as long as outdoor-sown seedlings. C. W.

ON THE TRIP DE LUXE.

New Yorkers' Convention Tour.

There will be pleasant memories with those of the New York Florists' Club and others who joined on the trip de luxe to and from the convention at Kansas City.

We started from Hoboken with a guide fully competent to explain the beautiful scenes along the route, beginning before reaching the Delaware Water Gap and continuing along the route of the first day's stage, till the shadows of eventide closed the view down for the night.

The afternoon of our second day was spent, after our arrival and welcome, on an automobile ride around the park system of Chicago, concluding with a banquet. Then we took the train for Kansas City, where we arrived safely and well prepared for the work before us, of which an account has been published.

Leaving Kansas City at the close of the convention, our party entrained Friday evening, August 18, for St. Paul and Minneapolis, and since there were special cars for the party, an enjoyable time was had before retiring. As soon as we landed, in the early morning, at St. Paul, we found brother florists there to meet us, and in a short time, under their guidance, were located at breakfast, where a beautifully decorated table had been arranged. Immediately after breakfast, we were escorted across the street to Holm & Olson's, where a short time was spent and every lady decorated with a corsage bouquet and presented with a large box of fine candies. Machines were waiting, and we were soon rolling through the streets and park boulevards towards Minneapolis, where Theodore Wirth and his colleagues met us and escorted us through the same gardens that so many of us enjoyed at the convention years ago. Our time being brief, we were soon whisked back to the hotel in St. Paul, where one of the most beautifully decorated tables was found filled with bounteous food. After luncheon, short speeches were in order, which were conducted by President Pennock. We were soon at the railroad station, saying goodby to our St. Paul and Minneapolis friends, each and all sorry our stay in their cities was so brief.

Surprises.

Rolling through strange but beautiful country, we finally reached Duluth, which was a surprise city in the immensity of its iron shipping industries. After dinner we embarked on the steamer Juniata for our trip to Buffalo, looking forward to a continuation of our most enjoyable trip. That our friends left behind had not forgotten us was evident upon going aboard, as they had said it with flowers in the shape of beautiful baskets to several members. When we reached Mackinac island, another treat was in store for us. With President Pennock and Ex-presidents Traendly, Vincent and A. L. Miller as leaders, the carriages were well filled with an admiring crowd, appreciating the wonderful landscaping of nature, the magnificence of which has to be seen to be appreciated.

The rest of the journey was pleasant, the closing of the trip being just as good as the commencement, and we parted with our leader, Mr. Tinsman, with a wish that he might be the leader again of a larger crowd to a future convention. Richard Vincent.

ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The last two weeks have been hot and dry throughout this section. The northern part of the state has been menaced by forest fires and some damage has been done. Outdoor flowers are beginning to show the effects of drought in short stems and poor flowers. Gladioli are much poorer. A few weddings and some entertaining improved business somewhat last week.

Various Notes.

R. A. Latham drove a new Studebaker car from Indiana last week.

C. A. Pfeiffer, of Winona, Minn., was in town Thursday, August 24, to judge gladioli at the Ramsey county garden show.

O. J. Olson judged the flower show at White Bear lake, in connection with the Ramsey county fair.

The New York Florists' Club, to the number of twenty, were guests of the Minnesota State Florists' Association, Saturday, August 26, on their way to the Great Lakes. S. S. Pennock and wife, F. H. Traendly and wife, A. L. Miller and wife, and Richard Vincent, Jr., were among the visitors.

The Ramsey County Men's Garden Club staged a fine flower and vegetable show in the show rooms of the St. Paul Gas Co., August 24 and 25. An exceptionally nice lot of gladioli were shown by J. C. Anderson, John S. Crooks and the Riverview Gardens. L. C.

A report of the annual convention of the National Association of Park Executives, which took place at Minneapolis last week, will be found elsewhere in this issue.

TORONTO, ONT.

Many flower shows were held last week, the largest being the gladiolus show at St. Thomas. The show was held at Alma College, under the auspices of the Ontario Gladiolus Association. C. R. Hinkle, president of the American Gladiolus Society, was present. Florists from all over the province were present, and there were many entries from south of the border. The prize for the best seedling went to Campbell Bros., of Simcoe. N. F. Wright, of Sturgis, Mich.,

had an extensive exhibit. Dr. Bennett, of St. Thomas, was reëlected president. Vice-presidents are William Brown, Claude Ward, W. B. Varley, J. W. Crow and J. E. Brown. The show will be held at Guelph in 1923.

Plant registration in Canada took another advance step when the Canadian Horticultural Association, formed from the florists' and other horticultural bodies, was incorporated at Ottawa this week. The council has no shares or capital. The objects of the council include plant organization and registration and improvement of production, grading, packing, transportation, storage and marketing. It is expected that the cooperation of all forces in the business through this council will put many departments of the florists' business on a better footing. Up to the present, plant registration has been carried on by the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association, with H. J. Moore in charge. The further advance made is welcomed by members of the association.

Many of the retail stores are undergoing the brightening up process in preparation for the anticipated fall trade.

Tom Manton and H. G. Dillemuth are among the big exhibitors at the flower show at the Canadian national exhibition. The show this year appears to be more popular with the professional growers. A further reference to it will be made next week.

S. A. McFadden, of Tidy & Son, left for a week with his family at their cottage at Otter lake.

G. M. Geraghty, of Dunlop's, Ltd., has returned from Pilgrims' Rest, on Georgian bay.

William Skilliter, of J. H. Dunlop & Son, Ltd., is holidaying at Midland. During his absence the wholesale department is in charge of Frank Dunlop.

H. J. P. Hammett, grower and retailer, has been in much demand recently as a judge at the various flower shows. George Baldwin has also been busy at the same work. J. J. H.

SAGINAW, MICH.

An event eagerly anticipated by old and young was the florists' annual picnic, recently held. This year's outing was most successful. Blessed with beautiful weather, about 150 people attended the outing, held all day Wednesday, August 23, at the Goetz grove.

The feminine members of the party and the children enjoyed games and races, while Saginaw played Bay City a game of baseball. Bay City won by a score of 5 to 0. The tug of war was also won by Bay City. At 7 p. m. an old-fashioned basket picnic supper was served.

The florists' next meeting will be with Walter W. Caple, of Mount Pleasant, Monday, September 4, Labor day. All will motor thither with their families. G.

CYCLAMENS.

It is not yet too late to sow cyclamen seeds, if plants of good size are wanted for Thanksgiving and Christmas sales in 1923. Wonderful specimens of this splendid winter-flowering plant are now raised in sixteen or seventeen months from seed, and it never pays to carry over any unsold stock. Already many cyclamens from last year's sowings are in 6-inch, 7-inch and 8-inch pots, with splendid circular masses of handsome foliage, and, while plants are to a limited degree grown in 9-inch and 10-inch pots or even small tubs, the demand for these is not great and the big demand is for plants in 5-inch, 6-inch and 7-inch pots. You can get nice cyclamens of smaller size by sowing even as late as December, but, if you have the seed, by all means sow them now and the results will more than pay for the extra labor involved.

It does not pay all florists to grow their own seedlings. In many cases it will be far better to wait until next spring or even early summer and buy young stock from one of the specialists who advertise regularly in The Review. American, English and German seed is offered. All are good and each is in some way superior to its fellows. But do not buy cheap seed; the best is never too good.

The seed can be sown in pans or flats of light, sandy soil. One containing plenty of leaf-mold is ideal. If the seeds are sown in flats, be sure they are well drained. Sow the seed in rows, dropping them singly and gently pressing them with a light, smooth piece of board after sowing. Place the flats in a warm, moist house and keep them protected from sun and air until germination starts; then admit more light. Water the seed carefully with a fine rose and never allow the surface to become dry. If the soil is steam-sterilized a few days before sowing, you will not be troubled with weeds or surface slime.

DESTROYING WHITE FLIES.

The following description is that of a method of killing white flies which has been used with success by F. R. Matsinger, Camden, N. J., who says: "I use one-fourth of a pound of good fish-oil soap to two gallons of water. The soap is first shaved into about three quarts of hot water, in order to dissolve it thoroughly; then the cold water is added. Put it on with a spray. It is best to take the inner plate of the sprayer with the two holes in it out and use the straight stream, which drives under the foliage. As is the case when gas is used, you do not get all of the pests at the first time, but if you repeat the operation at the same strength, it will kill white flies, red spiders, mealy bugs, lice, grasshoppers, moths, June bugs, Japanese beetles, potato bugs and any other insects that infest the plants."

Louisville, Ky.—The William Walker Co., long at 615 South Fourth avenue, will be located at 603, only a few doors north of the old location, after September 1. The new store and equipment will give greatly improved facilities and a prompt increase in business is expected to result.

OLD YET NEW

MARL AS PLANT FOOD.

The ancient Romans knew that marl existed; in fact, they gave it its name and they knew in a quite general way how to apply the material for agricultural purposes. However, it has been the reward of this age of intensive agriculture to discover just what can be done with marl as a plant food. There is lime marl; there is potash marl and other marls. This article has to do with potash marl.

What is it? To those chemically inclined it can be said that an analysis of potash marl shows it to contain ingredients in the following percentages: Moisture, 4.05; loss on ignition, 4.83; insoluble matter, 50.79; iron and aluminum oxides, 28.52; phosphorus, 1.14; calcium oxide, 2.14; potash, 6.50. The total phosphorus content is 1.84 and the total potash content is 7.24.

Potash marl, besides being valuable for its potash and phosphoric acid content, is accompanied by a carrier which is itself important and contributes valuable property to the soil. Another valuable feature of potash marl often pointed out is the fact of its insolubility in water, combined with its quick availability to the plant. A further argument supporting the marl is the fact that it will not leach away, but will remain where placed until the plant exhausts the liquid content.

How can potash marl be employed? It should be used in exactly the same manner as any commercial fertilizer. Two and one-half tons to the acre may be figured as a maximum quantity and one and one-half tons to the acre as a minimum for such crops as timothy, clover and alfalfa. This gives an idea as to the application over big areas.

For the greenhouse about 150 pounds of potash marl should be thoroughly mixed with a dump cart of loam. And for propagation about 300 pounds of marl to a cubic yard of sand is a fair mixture. The condition of the soil where marl is to be used largely controls the amount needed. However, it is generally claimed that too large an application cannot hurt the crop.

In general, it has been found that in using potash marl the best results can be obtained by placing it directly in contact with the seed; this can be safely done, as there is no danger of burning.

Potash marl, as produced from the pits at Marlton, N. J., is distributed by Potash-Marl, Inc., of New York city.

J. W. Everitt, gardener for John Pratt, of Glen Cove, N. Y., has written of his experiences in the greenhouse with potash marl, as follows: "Having had many inquiries regarding the results of potash marl, I am sending you my experience in my house of roses, thinking it might be useful to you in answering many questions you may be asked. This being the second year for this house of roses, I decided to give them a top-dressing. This was in October. I used 150 pounds of marl to one dump cart of old sod, with cow manure. That was put with it when stacked up. I wish to state that I have the best roses I have ever had and all my gardening friends say the same. The plants are healthy and strong and in splendid condition. I intend using it extensively this year in vegetable growing."

CATTLEYAS.

A comparatively limited number of florists grow orchids. The number, however, is increasing, but would be greater if we were not denied the right to import cattleyas and other commercial orchids by quarantine 37. A great many hybrids are being raised, but it takes years to flower these. What is wanted are such forest species as Trianæ, labiata, Mossiæ, gigas, Gaskelliana and Percivaliana. Prices on these are now high and will remain so, unless the powers that be relax the present restrictions. Those who have cattleyas should give them good care and, during the hot months, they should have a moderate amount of shade, be sprayed over on all clear days and get a soaking, according to the weather. They should not be overwatered. If we get a hot, but almost sunless, week, one watering will suffice. On the other hand, if it is hot and clear, three waterings may be necessary. It is always safer to keep orchids somewhat on the dry side rather than too wet.

CYPRIPEDIUMS.

All of the cypripediums grown under glass are either East Indian or hybrids. Their requirements are different from those of cattleyas. Being terrestrial plants and not producing bulbs, they require more copious supplies of water than cattleyas, lælias and the various bigeneric hybrids like læliocattleyas, epicattleyas, brassolælias and brassocattleyas. They also enjoy more atmosphere, moisture and spraying and many species like more heat. Some of the better known species, like insigne and its many forms, Leeanum, villosum, aureum Hyeanum and others, succeed well in an ordinary greenhouse, where a minimum of 50 degrees is maintained in winter. In summer the common forms of insigne do splendidly in coldframes, if shade from the bright sun is afforded them. An occasional soaking of weak liquid manure will be found beneficial. There is a good call for cypripedium flowers all winter and spring and the flowers, of course, last many weeks on the plants in perfect condition, making it unnecessary to cut and sell them as soon as expanded.

DENDROBIUMS.

Most of the dendrobiums are Asiatic and are now in active growth. Prominent among these are D. nobile and its forms, many hybrids with nobile as one of the parents, Wardianum, formosum giganteum and Phalænopsis Schroederianum. We greatly miss the importations of these two latter valuable florists' orchids; no one propagates them here and stocks are running quite low. Dendrobiums love heat and moisture while making their pseudo-bulbs and are at their best when they can be given a special small house, which can be closed tight by each afternoon after the plants have had a thorough syringing. But many cannot afford a special house for them and to such I would say that the finest specimens of D. nobile and Wardianum it has ever been my pleasure to see were grown in carnation temperatures and not special orchid houses at all. D. nobile is probably one of the most popular orchids today, although it has been in commerce nearly a century and no country florist need be afraid to grow it. Propagation of this species from portions of bulbs which have flowered is comparatively easy in winter.

MISCELLANEOUS ORCHIDS.

It is really surprising in looking over florists' places today to see how many of them carry a few orchids. In addition to the species named above, some others are occasionally met with. Among these are cœlogynes, mainly cristata, which like a cool house or frame in summer; cymbidiums, coming favorites that have magnificent spikes of flowers with great keeping qualities, not difficult of culture, the most striking varieties to be seen at the spring shows. These need a good water supply now, being terrestrial. Odontoglossums are uncertain varieties, with the possible exceptions of grande, pulchellum majus and citrosmum. The beautiful crispum forms, which are found everywhere in Europe, are difficult to grow here, owing to our hot summers, but the first three kinds named succeed quite well with cattleyas and need a good water supply at this season. The beautiful, blue Vanda cærulea likes a fairly light spot in a house similar to cattleyas. Spikes are showing on these now and, as shell snails love them, put bands of cotton wool around them for protection. This applies also to such oncidiums as ornithorhynchum and varicosum Rogersii; the last named is invaluable for sprays and is one of the most useful and decorative of yellow orchids. At this season ventilators should never be closed where orchids are grown. Cattleyas, especially, love plenty of fresh air.

RIDDING MUMS OF MEALY BUGS.

Kindly inform us of the surest method of exterminating mealy bugs on chrysanthemums. A. E. C.—Kan.

The remedy for mealy bugs on chrysanthemums is the nicotine solution, used as per recommendations printed on the can. It is always better to use too little than too much of the fluid when applying a remedy of this kind. If you find the result not satisfactory, strengthen the mixture until it is. Mealy bugs on mums suggest either neglect in growing the plants during the summer or that the house is badly in need of paint. If the plants are kept sprayed well at all times, mealy bugs will never appear. The above remedy will keep the pest down, however, until the crop is cut.

DISEASED CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

We have been growing chrysanthemums for thirteen years and have had no trouble with our Glorisia until this year. The stock of this variety is becoming flecked with brown spots. How can we overcome this disease?

M. & S.—Pa.

The chrysanthemum "Glorisia" I do not know. The brown spots may be due to a fungus, or more probably are the work of a leaf-miner. If it is the latter which is troubling your stock, spray the plants with nicotine sulphate. If it appears to be a disease pure and simple, apply a fungicide in a liquid form, like Bordeaux mixture, or a dust spray, either dry Bordeaux or sulphur and lime.

KILLING MUM MIDGE.

In fumigating for chrysanthemum midge, do you think nicotine burned in tin containers is as effective as papers? I have fumigated with the former several times and it makes a good fumigant. It is much cheaper than the papers and if it is as effective, I certainly should like to use it. How many papers would you use in fumigating a house 33x118 feet? W. B. V.—Mich.

It is suggested you spray your mums instead of fumigating to combat the midge. Use one ounce of nicotine solution and four ounces of fish-oil soap to four gallons of water and spray every second day, preferably in the evening. Continue this treatment until you are rid of the pest, which should be in three to four weeks, but be sure your stock is clean when you cease spraying.

CUTTING FUEL COST

CHANGING BOILER TO USE OIL.

Will you kindly advise me whether or not I can successfully use an oil burner in a high-pressure 40-horsepower tubular boiler? The boiler is a Brownell and when using coal we carry fifteen pounds of steam. What kind of oil burner would you advise and where can I get one? I wish to heat about 15,000 feet of glass. My fire box is 3x5 feet. What kind of fuel oil is it advisable to use? D. C. F. C.—Kan.

An oil-burner equipment may be applied to any type of boiler with a great degree of success and economy, provided care is used in properly constructing the checkerwork in the combustion chamber of the boiler. The cut below shows the interior of the combustion chamber of a boiler after the necessary changes have been made to convert the boiler from burning coal to the use of oil as fuel. The grates of the boiler are covered with bricks, as shown in the illustration, which in turn are covered with fire clay built up in such a manner as to deflect the blast flames, break them up, and carry them over the baffle wall or checkerwork. The natural draft will carry the flame well on to the rear of the boiler. In this way the intense heat produced will not be concentrated in any one place in the fire box, and a long flame is produced, giving a more evenly distributed heat and eliminating all danger of burning out any of the steel or iron surfaces within the boiler.

The most satisfactory fuel is found in fuel oil. The cost is lower than that of any of the other grades, and at the same time it has a higher calorific value. A high efficiency is reached by atomizing the oil at the nozzle by compressed air, and spraying it over a gas flame. In this way no carbon is formed on the burner, absolute safety and economy are assured and oil as heavy as that having a twenty-six Baume gravity may be used. By passing the oil spray over the gas jet the temperature of the spray is raised to its flashing point before it is fired. The same object is accomplished when steam is used as the atomizing agent, but it has been found that the amount of water in the steam is just sufficient to deaden the flame slightly. The deciding factor here is, however, whether the cost of the electric motor and air compressor necessary with the former system will be greater or less than the loss of heat due to the deadening effects of the steam upon the flame, where the latter system is used. It is generally conceded that the compressed air is the better system for the smaller plants.

No definite figures on the oil consumption can be given, because every system is operating under different conditions and circumstances and consequently the fuel requirements are variable. Engineers calculate roughly, however, that 100 gallons of fuel oil burned in this manner are equivalent to one ton of soft coal of a grade of 13,000 British thermal units per pound, a British thermal unit being the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree at or near its maximum point of density.

O. D. Marshall.

FORCED DRAFT HEAT.

A new method of heating is being used by George W. Davis, of Lincoln and Warren avenues, Detroit, Mich., in which the forced draft system is employed and which has given exceedingly satisfactory results. The explanation of the system by Mr. Davis is as follows:

"In the system there are ¾-inch pipes distributed evenly on the under side of the grate, which are used for the purpose of increasing the area exposed to the draft, thereby keeping the grate cool to such an extent that it cannot burn out. I have a 5-year guarantee on the grate.

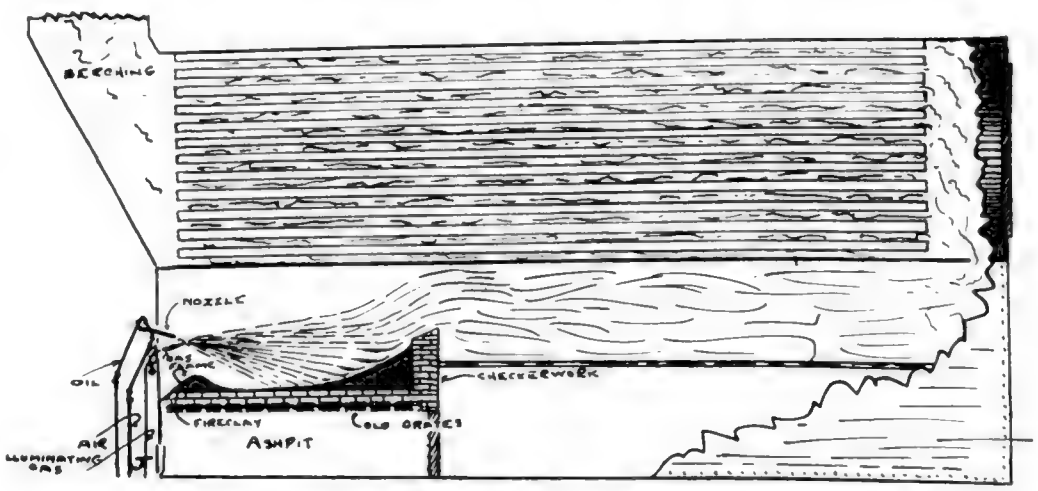
"The ash pit is made up on a brick foundation and is air-tight. This air-tight chamber is connected with the motor and blower by a galvanized iron pipe. My installation has cost $900, or about 50 cents per square inch of grate area. The heater is a Capital, with a radiating capacity of 6,500 square feet. Any kind of coal can be burned. The market price of Pocahontas mine-run today in Detroit is from $10.50 to $11 per ton. I put in about fifty tons of hard coal, slack and coke breeze for $3 per ton and got most satisfactory results during our tests, and feel that I have solved the fuel problem.

"At the Vienna bakery, where this system has been in operation for nine months, the saving in the amount of fuel burned has been material. Formerly this firm used anthracite coal costing $14 per ton. The firm has used screenings and coke breeze during the last nine months at $1.50 per ton. The coal strike has advanced the price of coal, but this low-grade coal can be bought today for $3 per ton. I find the system easier to handle than my old system and I can get up steam in one-half the time.

"I had seen tests made at the University of Detroit and at the Vienna bakery before installing it in my own place, and these tests were in every way similar to my own. I have had a delegation of florists at my greenhouses and have explained the system to them, even going so far as to start the fire in order to show them just how the system works, with the result that six of these florists have decided to put the system into their own greenhouses.

"The tests at the university proved that a ton of screenings or coke breeze will return as good results by this system as a ton of Pocahontas mine-run on the natural draft system.

"The forced draft system burns 100 per cent of the carbon in the coal. The clinkers formed can be easily removed, but they cannot fuse to the grate on account of the latter being air-cooled. There is a draft gate in the intake air pipe which can be attached to the diaphragm to regulate the fire.



"When the draft is shut off the hard coal screening fire will last for twenty-four hours. This will permit a great saving of fuel during the warm days in the fall and spring."

OBITUARY.

J. M. Underwood.

J. M. Underwood was born November 10, 1844, at Palmyra, Wayne county, New York, and died at Lake City, Minn., August 17, 1922. The body was cremated at Forest cemetery, St. Paul, August 19. Mr. Underwood when quite young moved to Illinois and received a high school education at Ann Arbor, Mich. At an early age he exhibited a love of horticulture and at 11 years of age bought trees and shrubs to plant about his home. In 1868 he moved to Lake City, Minn., to become superintendent of a nursery owned by Dr. P. A. Jewell. He continued in this position until Dr. Jewell's death, in 1878, when he bought out the nursery property and named it the Jewell Nursery, in memory of its founder.

From this small beginning has been built up one of the largest nurseries in the country. He was always interested in promoting the growing of fruits, vegetables and flowers and for thirty-eight years served the Minnesota State Horticultural Society as treasurer, president and chairman of its board of directors. He also served as a member of the board of managers and president of the Minnesota State Agricultural Society. Mr. Underwood was known personally by thousands of horticulturists and farmers throughout the state. He was married in 1874, and his wife and one son survive him. Roy D. Underwood has been the active manager of the nursery for several years past.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

A PAGE OF TIMELY AID AND ADVICE TO GROWERS

PEONIES.

Late August and September is the best time of the whole year for dividing and transplanting peonies. Of course, they may be planted as late as November, also in spring, but the coming few weeks will allow the divisions to make nice roots and become sufficiently established to make really excellent plants next year. Plant only a few varieties and bear in mind that clear pink is the best seller; next to that, pure white. The red, rose and other shades are less popular commercially. The small grower cannot afford the luxury of the more high-priced sorts, but there are a good number of fine standard varieties offered by specialists, which will fill the needs of the average florist nicely. Do not use much manure at planting time and be sure that it is well decayed. Fresh manure is largely responsible for many peony ailments. A good commercial fertilizer is safer than animal manure, unless the latter is well rotted.

STEVIAS.

Do not neglect this useful plant, the stevia. It is a subject no country florist can dispense with, furnishing flowers as it does from November until March, provided the grower can keep the plants sufficiently cool. If you are growing these plants in pots, 8-inch and 9-inch are not too large. Stevia is a rampant grower and should be pinched until the end of August. Many growers plant stock in the field. These must be lifted and potted or benched before any frost arrives, as stevias will not stand a breath of it. The plants are quite brittle and need careful handling. They also need some shade for a time and frequent sprayings until well established. My experience has been that pot culture gives much finer spikes and a greater number of them than can be had from lifted plants.

PRIMULAS.

Now that the weather is getting somewhat cooler at night, primulas, cyclamens, calceolarias, cinerarias, begonias and other winter and early spring-blooming plants are growing much more rapidly and demand a little attention in pricking out or repotting. All these plants succeed best in a light compost in the early stages of growth. Primulas, no matter whether you are growing chinensis, malacoides, obconica or kewensis, need a moderate shade at this season and are really better in a cold-frame where they can have some shade in the day and have the sashes removed entirely on overcast days and at night, unless torrential rains threaten. Of course, if you have a small house with benches well up to the glass, this will be an ideal place for all the primulas. Space the plants occasionally, so that they will keep shapely and stocky, and do not shade heavily, as this would make the plants leggy. All primulas succeed best in a rather low temperature. The Chinese primroses and obconica can, however, be planted on light benches or shelves and given as much as 55 degrees at night when wanted for Christmas.

POINSETTIAS.

The last cuttings should go in now. These are useful for making up into small pans and they make nice dwarf plants. Pot along earlier plants. A 6-inch pot will produce one large bract, but the bulk of the plants sell best made up into pans anywhere from six to ten inches in diameter. If you want some really big, handsome bracts, it is not yet too late to plant out some of your stock in a bench where a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees at night can be maintained. Poinsettias seem to stand almost any treatment in the hot summer months. The real rub comes when we get cold nights following hot days. At this time careful watering is necessary, if a loss of foliage is to be avoided.

MARGUERITES.

Early in the summer cuttings on yellow and white marguerites which are not full of buds are scarce. Now you can secure a nice crop of fancy cuttings and many of these are free from buds. Even though you plan to carry over a number of old plants, it is well to remember that their tenure of life is comparatively short and that a good batch of cuttings inserted in August will give you nice, shapely plants, which will render a good account of themselves in winter and spring. You will probably get better cuttings now on the white than the yellow varieties; a month later take some more of the latter. Do not overlook Mrs. Sander. Flowers come single or semi-double under glass, but outdoors now they are double and prove to be a quite useful subject for funeral work.

SHOW PELARGONIUMS.

Pelargonium plants which have lain on their sides, resting, for some weeks should now be pruned back tolerably hard and, as soon as they have started to break, should be shaken out and repotted, using pots one or two sizes smaller than they were in previously. Remove all the soil and cut back the long roots somewhat before potting. Usually the plants are cut back, potted at once and started up; this often causes the plants to rot. This will be avoided if the plants are kept tolerably dry after pruning and allowed to start into growth a little. A sandy loam containing a little well rotted manure makes a good compost. Be careful to water only moderately for a short time after potting. A number of cuttings can be taken at pruning time; these will develop into splendid plants in 6-inch pots for next spring's sales. Where it is desired to get quantities of cuttings, one or two of the old stock plants should be planted out and these will furnish a great crop of propagating material a few weeks hence.

PROPAGATION.

It is not too early to take a batch of cuttings from such tender subjects as alternantheras, coleus, iresines, acalyphas, crotons and other warmth-loving foliage plants. Of course, frost may not touch such plants in some sections until late October; on the other hand, it comes not infrequently in late August in the more northerly states. Geraniums will root much better if left a while longer. Soft growths, full of sap, are much more liable to damp off than the firmer-jointed ones that can be had later in the season. Such popular evergreens as Evonymus radicans and its varieties, Carrierei and vegeta, and Pachysandra terminalis, one of the finest of ground-cover plants, root readily at this season in a close frame if put in sandy loam. They should have shade and no ventilation for a month and, if sprayed lightly several times daily, practically every cutting will root. Be sure to keep all the cuttings well sprinkled with fresh, cold water, so that none will wilt. Also, be careful not to dip the cuttings in any water which has stood even twenty-four hours, or a large proportion will go black.

PLANTING EVERGREENS.

Spring is the best time to plant nearly all evergreens. The next best period is late summer. The last part of August and first half of September I have found to be a safe time to do any necessary transplanting. There are too few trees and shrubs, both deciduous and evergreen, planted in fall; too much is always left to the strenuous spring season. Rhododendrons, kalmias, andromedas, evonymus of the radicans type, retinisporas, thujas, spruces, junipers and yews may all be successfully planted now if a few essential principles are borne in mind. The roots should be carefully protected from the sun and air. The plants should be thoroughly firmed and well watered after planting. A mulch of half-decayed leaves, grass, straw or litter will help to conserve the moisture and, in the event of hot, dry weather following the planting, an occasional spraying in the evening will be found beneficial.

BOILER REPAIRS.

Do not leave such necessary work as overhauling the boilers too long. Warm weather is the time to attend to this. They may or may not need repairs; if they do, now is the time to attend to it.

REPLACE the window boxes of geraniums and petunias with others of evergreens for over winter. You can thus make your customers come twice, instead of once, a year.

PASSAGE of the new tariff is not anticipated before the November elections. It appears assured that all the trade's imports this season will come in under the present law.

EDWARD MCCALLUM, of Pittsburgh, sends greetings from Frankfort on the Main, Germany. "I am expecting my Review tomorrow," he post-cards; "it will look good to me."

SEPTEMBER! Where has the summer gone? Only the energetic, forehanded florists are ready for fall. The majority yet have much to do, with the busy business season right at hand.

HIGH prices for bulbs and short crops are assisting the quarantine in driving more business into the plant growers' hands. They will have calls for all the stock they can produce next spring.

AN important service could be done the trade by the S. A. F. in establishing a standard system of accounting, as suggested in an able paper by a New York accountant at the Kansas City convention.

BE careful under what names you sell varieties of any sort of plant. Don't trust your memory or someone's word, if you are not certain; verify either. There is enough confusion in horticultural nomenclature without unintentional additions.

MAINTENANCE of the coal miners' high wage scale and increases in pay in the textile and steel industries appear to be starting another spiral toward high costs. Such a movement of price inflation will be a short one, it is thought, with a corresponding drop when it ends.

SINCE a certain weekly in this field "does not want to report important events in daily newspaper fashion," it will wait for a future issue to tell of the discussion and resolution bearing on quarantine 37 at the Kansas City convention. Those who were anxious to learn what transpired read about it in last week's Review. Just another straw indicating the wind's direction!

PLANT shrubs in the autumn; it is a means of developing a second season equal to the spring bedding profits.

NEXT season the demand for Gladiolus 1910 Rose will place it among the leaders. It is the shade of pink preferred by retail florists.

REPORTS regarding the results of renewed attempts to grow Manetti stocks in America are not encouraging. Some day, perhaps, it may come to pass, but on this item we are far from self-reliant.

AGRICULTURAL crops are said to influence the purchasing power of at least half our population. In that event, the favorable crop reports augur improvement over last year. There will be more money to spend.

BECAUSE of the favorable growing season, field-grown carnation plants were more abundant when the 1922 benching date arrived than they had been for several years, or so it seemed. Some people thought they were so plentiful the surplus would not sell. During August, however, many growers had disposed of all their surplus and it is a well known fact that the bulk of the demand comes late, after vacancies have appeared on the early planted benches, or after a house of early mums has been cut. Field-grown carnation plants will sell steadily until hard frost.

SOMEBODY will have a hard job preparing the "suitable letter of protest" urged by the committee on the president's address, in the report unanimously approved at the Kansas City convention, to be sent Secretary Wallace, "protesting against the insinuation in the conference [on quarantine 37] report" that the chairman of the S. A. F. tariff and legislation committee "did not represent our organization," inasmuch as the resolution passed the same day declared that the society, as a body, "cannot endorse the report of said committee in its attitude regarding quarantine 37 and its administration by the federal horticultural board."

COAL MINING RESUMED.

As settlements are made, following the agreement at Cleveland, coal miners are returning to work in various states and production is increasing materially. Progress is slow, however, since the mines must be put in shape after their long period of idleness. It is said an ample supply of cars is in the mining fields, and there will be plenty of coal available shortly.

In consequence of these reports, prices have weakened in various markets. Those who have coal on hand are using it while they wait to see how far prices will sink ere they must buy more. At the same time, however, a large number of consumers need coal, and no great retrogression in prices is looked for.

The Illinois mines are turning out mine-run almost entirely, to meet the great demand. The price was from $4.50 to $5 at the beginning of the week. Indiana ranged about the same. Prices on the Kentucky and West Virginia fuels are not easy to quote because of the scanty offerings.

HOW ROSE SOCIETY GROWS.

One of the remarkable events of recent floricultural progress is the rapid growth of the American Rose Society. Guided by commercial growers of roses, the membership of this body has been augmented by amateurs until today, according to President Robert Pyle, "this organization is made up of those who love or care about roses, not only in forty-six states, Canada and Mexico, but in twenty foreign countries. Eight hundred and nineteen communities are represented in the membership of 2,700 people."

In telling the work of the society to the American Institute of Park Executives, at Minneapolis last week, Mr. Pyle described its activities as follows: "(1) We are incorporated and, as a corporation of the first class, are cooperating with the bureau of plant industry of the federal Department of Agriculture for the wide and equitable distribution of the rose creations of the late Dr. Van Fleet. (2) The American Rose Society, furthermore, has the good fortune to work in coöperation with certain outstanding public park systems in Hartford, Conn., Portland, Ore., and Minneapolis; with Cornell University, at Ithaca, N. Y., and the federal government, at Washington, in the maintenance of rose test gardens. (3) The American Rose Society holds national exhibitions and fosters local rose shows. (4) It registers new American roses deemed worthy. (5) But perhaps the major source of our growing strength and rose influence is in our publications, which, in the view of many of our members, are alone worth the price of membership, which is $3 per year. These are edited by J. Horace McFarland, president of the American Civic Association, whose office in Harrisburg, as well as that of our secretary, John C. Wister, 606 Finance building, Philadelphia, is a focusing point and 'broadcasting station' for world-wide rose information."

More commercial growers than are now represented in the American Rose Society would find its publications and its influence worth their membership. Roses are called the "staff of life" to florists. As the Rose Society greatly promotes the love of and interest in that flower, it is eminently worth our stanch support.

EAST AND WEST.

It is an old saying in the publishing business that it is not where a paper is printed, but where it is read, which counts in bringing results to advertisers. The Review is read everywhere; the results are the same, east or west:

Please discontinue my ad on carnation plants, as we are sold out.—P. Hopman, New Galilee, Pa., August 26, 1922.

Please cancel our ad on carnations, as we are entirely sold out.—Ada Greenhouses, W. E. Pitt, Prop., Ada, Okla., August 25, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

B. C. A., Mo.—Appears to be Ipomœa pandurata, commonly called wild potato vine.

E. S., O.—Tamarix gallica.

O. F., Ala.—The narrow-leaved one is Buxus sempervirens; the broad-leaved one appears most closely to resemble Buxus sempervirens latifolia. There are numerous forms of B. sempervirens and points of difference in some are rather slight.

J. S. G. C., Ga.—The plant is Adiantum Capillus-Veneris magnificum.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A drive through the country districts would give one the impression that gladioli were somewhat on the wane, as the many fields and large plots of this popular and showy summer flower make much less of a display than a few weeks ago. In the wholesale markets, however, there is no perceptible diminution, but rather the reverse. It would be good policy on the part of growers to pinch off the spikes as soon as they show color, and rogues could be marked and eliminated. It certainly cannot bring much grist to the mill to continue to ship in shoals of spikes at present ruinous prices. Conditions with gladioli are a little worse than in former years, as there are more growers, more shippers and no more buyers.

The gladiolus avalanche helped to submerge asters, which are abundant and of splendid quality; fine flowers are offered at 50 cents per hundred. Roses are not having easy sledding and values on short-stemmed stock are low. Good flowers are not plentiful and bring fair prices. There are a few carnations of the new crop, but asters entirely outclass them at this season. There are fair numbers of lilies, L. speciosum and L. giganteum, without much sale.

Few dahlias are offered, although gardens are ablaze with them. Plenty of everlastings in variety, zinnias, scabiosas, sweet sultans, delphiniums, coreopsis, bachelor's buttons and other outdoor flowers are offered. Small lots of chrysanthemums come in, but there is no great demand for them. Asparagus trade is quite dull.

There are few cattleyas and little call for such as are offered. Valley is in small demand. In flowering plants, some small sizes of Begonia Melior are offered, as well as white and colored speciosum lilies.

Children's Garden Exhibition.

The annual display of children's garden products at Horticultural hall, August 26 and 27, filled the main and small halls to overflowing and competition was keen. Three sets of judges spent several hours in making the awards. In the vegetable classes there were as many as 100 entries for a dish of tomatoes and from fifty to 100 entries for sweet corn, cucumbers, string beans, potatoes, carrots and beets. In cut flowers competition was also keen. For a display of dahlias there were fifty entries and about every annual in the calendar was exhibited in fine shape.

Collections of wild flowers made a remarkable showing. The first, second and third prize displays contained no fewer than 269, 245 and 223 varieties, respectively. Each vase contained the Latin and common names and genera of the exhibit. It was an inspiration and delight to note the great attendance and keen interest of children, teachers, parents and others, something which means a great deal for the future of horticulture. The more of these shows we can have the better it will be for our business.

Various Notes.

Business with Wax Bros., at 44 Temple place, has increased so much that they have been compelled to make extensive additions and improvements to their store. The two steps in the front have been eliminated and a gently sloping entrance substituted. The depth of the show windows has been increased to eighteen feet and they are now deeper than any other flower store windows in Boston. Large mirrors are being placed along the sides and when the alterations are completed, about September 20, this will be one of the finest and most up-to-date stores in Boston. When Wax Bros. moved to Temple place from Tremont street, many predicted reduced sales; on the contrary, business has shown a decided increase.

For the funeral of the late William M. Wood, Jr., at Andover, August 20, Penn's had no less than 145 funeral designs, which filled five large vans. This was the largest number of orders for a single funeral the firm has had in a long time. The staff had to work many hours overtime to get all the orders executed. Orchids, gladioli, valley, roses and asters were the flowers mainly used. At the show of the North Shore Horticultural Society, at Manchester, August 22, Penn's captured first prizes for both a table decoration for eight covers and a basket of flowers.

The Houghton-Gorney Flower Shop is ever on the lookout for something out of the common. August 26 great numbers of visitors had to stop and admire one particular window display. A large tank filled the front and there was a natural and rocky background. In the water alligators were disporting themselves or basking on the sandy shores. In another window was a great display of named decorative and peony-flowered dahlias, with prices affixed. Dahlias are more than ever the rage this season and are blooming wonderfully well.

Henry Penn returns from his vacation this week. He has just purchased a beautiful stone mansion on Winslow road, Brookline, as a residence and will move in about September 5.

Harold A. Ryan, of the Mount Auburn Greenhouses, Cambridge, is a genuine hustler and business with him is always good. He has a grand lot of cyclamens from specimen size downwards, thousands in number, and carnations, chrysanthemums, palms, ferns, rubber plants, poinsettias and other stock are all in fine condition. Mr. Ryan is just breaking ground for a new residence for himself at the end of his greenhouse range and hopes to be able to move in ere severe weather starts.

No definite choice has yet been made of the new flower market site. It is now understood that a small committee has been selected to make a final choice and growers are rather anxiously awaiting their decision.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. always has beautiful window displays of dahlias and gladioli at this season, and anyone passing along Faneuil Hall square is sure to see an interested crowd admiring the displays. The company reports more interest in both dahlias and gladioli than ever.

I am sorry to report that Harold J. Patten is on the laid-up list. He fell in one of his greenhouses at Tewksbury a few days ago, but is, fortunately, convalescing nicely from his injuries.

St. Swithin's day proved dry this year and finished its course with thirty-three dry and seven rainy days to its credit, which no one can find any particular fault with.

The convention of the National Association of Gardeners, September 12 to 15, is going to attract a large attendance. Already reservations have been made for visitors from California, Iowa, St. Louis, Mo., and other distant points, and there will be a big delegation on the outside line from New York of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, leaving the evening of September 11.

Ernest H. Wilson returned to the Arnold Arboretum August 24, on the S. S. Pittsburgh from England. He had been away for over two years and had visited botanical gardens, nurseries and places of horticultural or arboricultural interest in Ceylon, India, all parts of Australia, New Zealand, Java, Sumatra, Bechuanaland, Natal, Nigeria, Cape Colony and other parts of Africa, the European continent and numerous points in Great Britain. In both Australia and New Zealand, Mr. Wilson was given free passes on all the railroads and so well did Australia agree with him that he put on twenty-eight pounds of flesh while there. He saw much of interest and value, which he will be able to write and lecture about, and, but for quarantine 37, could have added considerably to the treasures in our gardens.

Visitors the past week included David Lumsden, horticultural adviser to the F. H. B., Washington; Arthur E. Thatcher, recently returned from a long visit to England; L. E. Manning and A. T. De La Mare, Jr., New York.

William Sim is completing the installation of four new 16-foot steam boilers at Cliftondale. He has had the whole of his 200,000 carnations planted about a month and they are now forging ahead. The fine new seedling, Gold Dust, has a 400-foot house all to itself this season.

The coal situation, as it affects florists now, looms up rather ominously. Already we hear talk of running lower temperatures, as was done during the war period. Bituminous coal, procurable at $8.50 per ton a few weeks ago, is now held at $13.50 and growers are naturally worrying a good deal, especially those whose cellars are practically empty.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Here we are, at the summer's end, and everyone is glad the time for the incoming tide of business has arrived. The last week of August has been little better than its predecessors and the month, like July, has not been up to expectations. The trade here had hoped for a banner summer, and prepared for it, but he is the exception among wholesalers who can show sales up to last year. Most of the commission houses have lost a little money in both July and August. The retailers have, perhaps, averaged a little better; they have had about the usual volume of summer business and have obtained their stock at such low prices they have made a good margin on each sale.

Business always begins to pick up as soon as September arrives. The increase is not rapid unless there is an early frost, but the up grade may be counted on for the next several weeks. The indications are that the season will be a good one in this market, as there are more dealers buying flowers here than ever before.

There is as yet small change in the supply of stock available. With continued cool weather there will be a reduced supply of roses, but it is as yet too early to be able to count on the passing of the hot days; two or three of them together fill the market so full of roses that several cool days are needed to make it possible to work off the accumulation. Stock is improving rapidly in quality, but not, as yet, in price. Roses are cheap right now.

Dry weather last week reduced the cut of gladioli, but there will be plenty again after a little rain. In fact, there still are plenty, although the number of shippers is reduced to those growing large acreages for bulbs.

Asters also show the effects of dry weather, being less abundant and not so good. On the other hand, carnations now are arriving in considerable quantity and are improving in quality.

Chrysanthemums have come, the bulk of the stock being from California, but there are small receipts of locally grown flowers. Valley is not yet plentiful, although it soon will be, but there still are more Easter lilies than the market will take at any price above 15 cents. When the wholesalers attempt to advance prices on any item it simply turns the demand to other channels.

The price of ferns has been advanced, at first hands, to take effect September 1.

No Regular Mail Next Monday.

Next Monday, September 4, will be Labor day and there will be neither express service nor regular mail deliveries. Most of the Chicago wholesalers will replace the express deliveries and pick-ups with their own or rented trucks, but it is up to the customers to see that the orders reach the wholesalers. If mail is used for any order to be shipped between Saturday noon and Tuesday

HAVE YOU READ THE DICTIONARY?

Long, but interesting. Full of short stories.

And here is the Daily News Almanac. Lots of information.

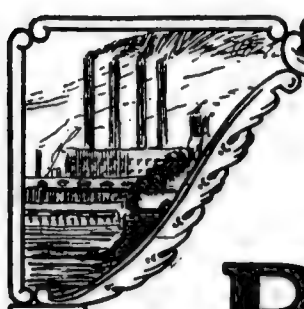
Which says that in ten years the population of the Mississippi Valley has increased by about one-seventh; from thirty-five millions to forty.

And in these ten years the total distribution of flowers over that area has come to be more than four times greater than it was in 1912.

The use of flowers per capita has increased thirty times as fast as the population. And the continual erection of new glass testifies to the belief of the grower that this disproportionate increase in demand will continue.

For the daily consumption of flowers in this region is still far below that of older communities; not a fraction of what it could be; or should be.

This great increase in demand could never be absorbed without a great reserve to draw on at need.



Chicago has always cheerfully assisted in taking care of this increase in business for the whole Mississippi Basin and without that help a thousand greenhouse and retail establishments which started small could never have gathered up their own growth. And Chicago will always be ready to assist you in absorbing your increase as it comes.

This market is the great feeder of enterprise; filling the deficiencies of the local greenhouse and supplying the reserve for the retailer.

Planning for a New Market.

Some months ago it was recorded here that H. A. Achenburg, of Teich & Co., realtors, 309 South La Salle street, had approached the wholesalers on the matter of simultaneous removal from the present market district to one where better accommodations are to be had for less money. Now Mr. Achenburg is asking the wholesalers to appoint a committee to go into the details prior to presenting a definite proposition. It is understood he has in mind a building at Lake and Jefferson streets adequate to house all the wholesale cut flower and supply houses.

Various Notes.

The first white chrysanthemums of the season appeared August 23, at the store of the E. C. Amling Co. They were locally grown October Frost.

The A. B. C. officers and employees had a ball game at the Hazel Crest Farm August 26 and, incidentally, another look at the gladioli growing there.

A. J. Zech and Mrs. Zech drove to Lake Delavan August 26, returning August 28. They plan to make the trip again to stay over Labor day. Miss Nelda Wolf returned to her duties in the office of Zech & Mann August 28, after three weeks spent in the mountains in Colorado.

Co. has handled few gladioli as well liked by the trade as is the variety named E. J. Shaylor. It is another Kunderd production.

Two of the energetic young Hollanders on the staff of A. Henderson & Co. are receiving congratulations. Harry Van Til's bride came over from Holland on the recent trip of the Noordam and they were married at once. Ben Bakker and Miss Carrie Van Aalst will be married in Los Angeles when Mr. Bakker makes his next trip to the coast. Their home will be in Chicago.

B. E. Ellis says the Chicago market has only begun; that it is the big flywheel which enables the trade engine to take on a suddenly increased load without stalling.

The Alpha Floral Co., at Wabash avenue and Adams street, opened its remodeled store August 29. During the last month a new and modern front has been put in, the walls have been lined with mirrors and new white fixtures have been installed. The store now ranks as one of the handsomest as well as among the best equipped in town.

Guy M. Reburn and his party left August 29, on their return home to Coatesville, Pa. They are traveling in their Marmon, which has run 78,000 miles in thirty months.

C. L. Washburn says he never has seen a handsomer showing of flowers than that at the funeral of F. S. Peabody, from whom Mr. Washburn has bought more or less coal for thirty years.

There was an excellent run of funeral work in the better-class stores early this week. The funeral of Levy Mayer, August 28, called out a showing of flowers rarely equaled, although some of the pieces seemed chiefly notable for size. The funeral of F. S. Peabody, at Hinsdale, August 29, also called for many flowers. Several stores sent men to Aurora August 26 with flowers for the funeral of ex-Senator Albert J. Hopkins.

C. J. Michelsen is giving the Twin Six a rest; he has a new Single Six roadster.

John Ziska's florists' first annual championship handicap is being played this morning at the Briargate Golf Club. Mr. Ziska expected about fifteen participants. Joseph Ziska & Sons have offered a silver cup.

The International truck which the Albert F. Amling Co. has used since Christmas to bring the day's cut to market now comes in heavily loaded. The truck, which has big pneumatic tires, makes a quick trip, being geared at a ratio which permits forty miles per hour on a good, open road.

Otto Amling is planning a trip to Europe.

A. T. Pyfer, who is on vacation, celebrated his forty-fourth birthday anniversary August 26.

Visitors.

Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., spent August 25 in this city, on his way home from Minneapolis. Mr. Pyle also is president of the American Rose Society and his trip to Minneapolis was to attend the annual convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents, before which he made an address on rose gardens, so convincingly that the association went on record to

E. W. McLellan, the well known San Francisco grower and wholesaler, was here last week to arrange for shipments of chrysanthemums to be made to this city. He went east, planning to interview officials of the American Railway Express at New York in the effort to obtain concessions in rates on shipments of cut flowers, at least to the extent of allowance for the weight of the ice used in packing, a concession already allowed the Florida asparagus shippers.

Swan Peterson, of Rockford, Ill., spent August 26 in Chicago, making many purchases. Mr. Peterson is starting a new place about four miles outside of Rockford. The nucleus, now under construction, consists of two houses, each 33x175, with service building planned to care for additions. The old place will be continued, as heretofore, for retail trade.

Arthur Peterson, of C. Peterson & Sons, Escanaba, was here August 28, on his way to Detroit, where the state fair is being held this week. Mr. Peterson is a member of the state fair board and has charge of the floricultural department. Needless to say, visiting florists receive a warm welcome at the fair.

E. J. Fancourt and J. J. Karins, of Philadelphia, were guests of C. L. Washburn and Mrs. Washburn at Hinsdale over last Sunday.

Walter Amling was here August 28, on his way home to Pana after a business trip to New York.

OMAHA, NEB.

The Market.

Business last week was rather streaked—some days were good, others were bad. Gladioli are becoming scarce now and the prices have advanced from $6 to $8 per hundred. Asters are demanding $6 per hundred for the best. Marigolds are fine and plentiful, at $2 and $3 per hundred.

Roses are arriving in fine shape; while the extremely hot weather of last week was hard on them, they make a first-class appearance. The main cut seems to be Columbia, followed by Premier and Russell. Some short carnations are arriving, at $2 and $3 per hundred. Extra fancy lilies are to be had at $15 and $18 per hundred. White roses are in demand, but there are few to be had. Buddleias are becoming popular here.

Various Notes.

Local florists are anxiously waiting to open next Sunday, after the Sunday closing that has lasted all summer.

About 250 attended the florists' picnic, held August 25 at Krug park. One of the finest events was the married men's race, which was won by Blaine Wilcox. The race was closely contested

The Market.

There are fewer roses; this makes their market more active. Valley is quite scarce. Orchids are scarce, the little Cattleya Harrisoniæ being the only variety that can be had at times. Asters and gladioli are plentiful. Really fine stock sells pretty well. There are a good many poor asters and poor gladioli; these are hard to sell at low prices. Easter lilies are equal to the demand. Dahlias have appeared; they are being discouraged until September.

Planning a New Place.

"I have really done nothing on my new place yet beyond starting to drill a well," said George Burton, August 21, "but I shall be glad to tell you my plans and, when we do anything, to tell you about it. The plan is to build a place that will hold 100,000 plants. [Mr. Burton was understood to mean rose plants.] Some of the builders have been out to see me. No, I did not ask them. I am asking figures for sufficient glass to cover 36,000 plants, with the idea of starting with that amount and adding the rest later. We expect to build narrow houses, 28x400 feet. They will be even-span, ridge and furrow, and open between, with cypress gutters ten inches wide. That will bring a lot of criticisms. John Andre's new houses are thirty-five feet wide. I suppose Lord & Burnham would call that a narrow house, but I want it narrower still. Twenty-eight feet will hold four beds; with the gutters eight feet high, there will be little shade. No, I don't think there will be any trouble in glazing. With a 16-foot bar, we shall only need a 14-foot glazing board and then, should a light be out in the middle of the house, there will only be 200 feet to carry this board. Ice and snow will not trouble us in the gutters between such narrow houses.

"The well that we have started to drill is intended to secure 100 gallons of water a minute, 6,000 gallons an hour. That will be enough for 100,000 plants. With a large standpipe to secure pressure, we shall not use any pumps. The boilers will be in a pit fourteen feet deep. The condensation will be returned to the boilers by gravity.

"You are surprised at our preference for wooden gutters; they last. Two visitors dropped in the other day, father and son. The name, I think, was Amling. They were from Painesville, O. They were practical men, who were going to build. They had cypress gutters fire of unknown origin started on econd floor of the building of the ldin Pottery Co., at 715 to 719 rton street, Thursday afternoon, st 24. The blaze spread rapidly before it could be got under control, great damage had been done to the building and stock. The loss is estimated at $75,000. The force escaped.

J. G. Whilldin said that the loss was serious, but that he looked to get the factory back into working order soon. Mr. Whilldin added that the building and stock are insured. Mr. Whilldin, who has managed the company continuously and successfully since his boyhood, celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday August 26. He is undismayed

Florists' Club Meeting.

Coal.

The anthracite coal salesmen advised their customers last March to buy enough coal then to last until June, not more. Coal would be cheaper then; the miners were overpaid and must accept a reduction. The conference between the operators and miners broke up August 22 without reaching an agreement. The operators offered the pay of last March until April, 1923; then arbitration. The miners asked this pay until April, 1924; then the right to strike.

Soft coal is obtainable.

Various Notes.

Charles H. Grakelow sailed for Europe, on the steamer Majestic, from New York, August 26. He expects to return in four weeks. Mr. Grakelow received a handsome testimonial, a piece of plate, in Scranton a fortnight ago, on the completion of his term of office as state president of the Elks.

John Berger returned August 26 from a delightful motoring trip to Canada.

J. B. Hill moved his store, Hill's Flower Shop, from 4348 Frankford avenue to 4465 Frankford avenue. The new store is a fine improvement.

Thomas Karins, son of James J. Karins, has joined the sales force of the Joseph G. Neidinger Co.

George D. Clark, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., left for California, August 25.

Mr. Volz, of the Volz Flower Shop, at New Britain, Conn., was here a few days ago.

Herbert S. Bell has his store at Germantown and Chelsea avenues fitted up attractively. Mr. Bell believes in carrying a good stock of flowers even in midsummer.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer says that fall orders are already coming in strongly.

Robert Kift has gone to Los Angeles, Cal.

J. Otto Thilow took the Rutledge Horticultural Society members, some twenty-five in all, to Riverton, August 26. From there they went in a bus to Riverview to see the cannas and then to Locust Farms to see the hardy phloxes; a card in the window of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., on Chestnut street, assures passers-by that both are now at their best.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has issued its fall wholesale catalogue.

Raymond Brunswick was delighted with western hospitality after an eventful and most satisfactory trip.

Raymond Kesler spent a happy evening with his friend, William J. Baker, before leaving for the slope.

Henry Bauer has returned to the city.

Florists Hold Picnic.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club held its annual picnic August 24, at Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Barr's farm. One hundred and twenty-five attended and a most enjoyable time was had by all.

In bowling on the green, E. O. Hostetter and A. M. Herr possibly were the star marksmen. The program of sports resulted as follows:

Boys' balloon blowing—John Girvin.
Girls' balloon blowing—Mary Landis.
Boys' potato race—Henry Rohrer, first; Luther Hostetter, second.
Cigar lighting contest—Edward Rohrer.
Nail driving contest, ladies—Mrs. Jack Moore.
Tack driving contest, ladies—Mae Brenneman.
Tack driving contest, girls—Mary Weaver.
Milk drinking contest, girls—Ruth Landis.
Milk drinking contest, boys—William Landis.
Cracker eating contest—Mary Rohrer.
Banana eating contest, boys—John Landis.
Running race, boys—Harry Gayley.
Running race, girls—Lavina Hostetter.
Flower pot breaking contest—John Gayley.

At cards, prizes were won by Mae Brenneman and Edgar Herr.

Two guinea trot contests were full of enjoyment. Lavina Hostetter succeeded in catching the guinea in the ladies' class and her father, Phares S. Hostetter, captured the one for which the men competed.

At 5:30 p. m. lunch was served. A short inspection of the Barr farms and nurseries, prior to the picnic, found everything in tiptop shape. An immense tobacco crop should return a large revenue. The dairy end of the farm represents twenty thoroughbred cows; these are a desirable addition to the Barr farm. H. K. R.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is little, if any, change in the condition of the New York cut flower market. Outside-grown flowers still dominate the market and most of the business accomplished is with gladioli and asters, both of which continue to arrive daily in tremendous quantity, leaving the accumulations of a previous day for movement at ridiculous concessions or consignment to the ash barrel. Heavy shipments of dahlias are now adding concern, and move slowly.

The demand for flowers generally is dull, most sales covering largely requirements for window and store decoration. Retailers say that while August business is usually at the minimum, this year it is strikingly small. There are indications of an early fall, and the legitimate trade will welcome their fulfillment.

Roses are not at all plentiful, yet there is more than a sufficiency for requirements. American Beauty is in greater supply than the demand will absorb; consequently there is a low range of prices for specials. Hybrid teas move rather better, and arrivals are pretty well cleared out by the end of a day.

The supply of cattleyas is on the short side, but the demand for them is small and nobody seems to mourn an insufficiency.

Easter lilies are plentiful, but move fairly well within a price range of $10 to $15 per hundred. L. speciosum is also in fair supply. Valley is less plentiful than for some time, but ample for the demand, which is weak. Bouvardia Humboldtii is in oversupply, and stock of good quality is available.

The supply of miscellaneous flowers is exceedingly large. Besides the avalanches of gladioli, asters and dahlias, there is an immense supply of zinnias, among which are some fine strains. Other items available are gypsophila, cosmos, feverfew, calendulas, marigolds, buddleias, tuberoses, tritomas, cornflowers, centaureas, etc. Chrysanthemums have put in an appearance.

Various Notes.

Most of the visitors to the Kansas City convention arrived back in New York August 6. Among them was Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., who proceeded direct home. He planned, however, to be in New York Tuesday, August 22, to preside at a meeting of the executive board of the American Dahlia Society on that day.

Charles Lenker, of Freeport, L. I., sailed for Europe August 7. Some of his friends facetiously suggest that while away "he will interview Kaiser Wilhelm, to confer as to whether Ireland is in need of a president or a referee."

Co., made a quick trip back from the Kansas City convention, and reports the trade exhibition there to have been successful, and productive of good business.

The Henshaw Floral Co. has arrangements all completed to open its branch wholesale cut flower and supply store at 80 New street, Newark, N. J., Friday, September 1.

The planting of dahlias in the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, near the Museum building, is attracting crowds of visitors, and many in the trade. In all, there are about 500 varieties, all labeled, and more than half are in flower at this time. Some of the newest varieties are to be found in the collection.

C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., will open his newly acquired store, at 4 East Fifty-third street, September 16.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held in the club's quarters Monday evening, September 11.

At the east end of the lower level of Grand Central terminal, the National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild has a booth where it asks flower growers, commuters and travelers to leave what flowers they can for distribution to the sick, poor and lonely who are not able to afford even such a simple luxury. Could not a supply from the unusable stocks of our wholesale markets be sent to this bureau instead of awaiting the arrival of the ash man? J. H. P.

Putting your ad in this paper will be like moving your store to Main Street

Quite a few florists have sent orders for cards in the Telegraph Delivery Section (Pink Part) of The Review to start September 1. Wouldn't you like to do the same?

There isn't any question that it is good business to have your ad in The Review. Everybody knows that The Review, printing 13,000 copies each week, is very much the most widely read of the trade papers. Naturally it is the best advertising medium any florist can use.

We should like to have you with us during the good season now close at hand and if you will use the enclosed order blank we will see that the ad is started September 1st in good shape.

FLOWERS FOR FAMOUS FOLKS.

"The Bride Was Attired—"

Conspicuous among the records of history is the subject of habiliments. Long before fashion magazines described in minute detail the fashions of the famous for the benefit of readers, word of mouth had reported with popular pleasure what dress had graced milady, at the wedding, ball or other occasion, and what her majesty, the queen, had chosen to wear at a given place at a particular time. In fact, so strong had this urge become in the annals of history that the popular mind began to logicize that a person's greatness depended for the most part upon the clothes he wore, and later a wise mind felt it necessary to advise the public that "feathers do not make the bird." Today it is found frequently necessary to repeat this verbal antidote.

But the sentiment has persisted and today the Sunday society columns, the fashion magazines, etc., display enthusiastically the habiliments of the famous. Hats, their color, model and shape; shoes, their style of toe and heel; gowns, their material and cut; robes and numerous other articles of apparel cast great credit upon and are a matter of vast edification to many a milliner, modiste, ladies' tailor and dry goods merchant, not to mention the fashion-following feminine flock who are their patrons.

Fitting Corsage for the First Lady of the Land.

Hybridizing the Habit.

Furthermore, so deeply has this habit of habiliments sunk into the public senses that this dress habit has invaded, although to a slighter degree, the ranks of the masculine. Thus we see that when the Prince of Wales invaded the country on the wings of society not long ago, the newspapers noted quite prominently—all the reporters could not have been women—among other characteristics, his hats, his coats, his trousers, his vests, his neckties, canes, gloves, etc., etc. Something was barely mentioned about a boutonniere, but whether it was a carnation, rose, bunch of violets or what not, nobody but a few ever knew.

This popular taste for dress, then, is a powerful sentiment that has augmented through ages of history. The point to us is that, rightly harnessed, this desire for personal decoration can pull for tremendous business. And the florist, if he so wills, can put himself in the same situation as the wide-awake milliner who furnishes the president's wife with a most expensive hat free of charge at the inauguration. Why does she do it? Because her name will be immediately heralded throughout the press of the nation, and maybe other nations, and the resultant business will be tremendous.

Now, beauty is older than fashion, and flowers are as old as beauty, being its first exponent. But, strange to say, in past ages, flowers have been just flowers, men having lacked the sense of beauty and the skill that can make them the finest adornments. Just as a boy does not appreciate the beauties of home until he has left, so the people have not loved the flowers so dearly until their beauty has been pointed out.

But today the florist is more widely awake and the leaders in the trade are grasping the opportunity to array the famous in flowers, and the public has begun to listen to what the flowers are saying. Before long, no doubt, our society editors will consider a report incomplete without adequate attention to the floral decorations in detail and the voice of the flowers will become consistently and regularly universal. Already they are speaking in a loud whisper.

The year just passed saw the advent and demise of a considerable number of events that created a stir not only within our own borders, but internationally as well. And it is no insignificant fact that at each and every one of these affairs the voice of flowers was melodiously appropriate and toned to each individual occasion.

For the First Lady.

At the inauguration of President Harding, for instance, a chromatic chorus of flowers breathed over the famous gathering and there were flowers for the ambassadors from the various countries who were present; flowers to indicate the regrets of those not so fortunate as to be present, and flowers speaking congratulations from famous people, and others not so famous, from many points of the globe. At such an occasion, of course, there stands out prominently the first lady of the land, and to bespeak and enhance her presence nothing can surpass the expressive flowers—not even a new hat. Leikens, of New York, realized that point, decided on a course and acted upon it. The result of his enterprise is seen in the corsage shown on page 68, which Mr. Clifford, of Leikens, made up for the occasion. Is it not a thing of beauty, with its harmonious assemblage of mauve brassocattleyas, lilies of the valley and tasteful greens bound delicately with Harding blue ribbon? This won praise and wide publicity for Leikens. It was immediately photographed and sent broadcast over the country, with the name of Leikens attached. It pays well to furnish flowers for famous folks.

A Royal Basket.

Another example is the basket shown on this page, made by Pelicano, Rossi & Co., San Francisco, for Albert, King of the Belgians, and presented to him when he was in that city with the queen. This striking arrangement was costly not because of the number of flowers used but because of their kind and quality and because of the artistic taste and care exercised in making the basket. Cattleyas, phalaenopsis, roses and adiantum provided the material. The florist supplied the art.

IMPRESSING AN IDEA.

Advertising is, basically, "advising the public." When the public has been advised, has taken the advice and is prepared to act upon it—then the crucial test arrives. Can you back up the gist of your advertising? This is the theme of a bit of advertising recently presented to the buying public by Lord's Flower Room, of Topeka, Kan. Two advertisements aimed to tell the people just what lies at the root of this firm's policy. The frankness of the advertisements' wording exerts a peculiar force that should make for increased business. The first of these appeared as follows in a space eight and one-half inches deep in three columns:

"IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE"
But
I've been reading

The speeches and recommendations made at the recent convention at Milwaukee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and in these I find it very tersely enunciated that the BASIC principle in advertising is the TRUTH. In Missouri the law requires it.

Even Advertising does not pay unless followed by the BASIC principles of a successful business—
QUALITY AND SERVICE

Our business for sixteen years shows we have profited by both and that
LORD'S FLOWERS "SATISFY"

The follow-up copy, appearing in space of the same size, followed the logic of the foregoing and served to impress the same fundamental idea on the buyers:

QUALITY—SERVICE

Both necessary in a succesful business, but quality without service availeth little.

We recently had so many orders piling upon us that we realized that it might be possible that even with our very efficient force we might not be able to deliver "on time."

We, therefore, took no chances and phoned an S. O. S. to Kansas City and two very capable florist friends answered our call and arrived at 4 a. m. by auto, joining our force at that early hour, which assured our "putting it over" on time.

That's quality and service and why

Do you note how "quality" and "service" are emphasized and how accurately the firm's motto is driven home?

FIRST CALL FOR BALTIMORE.

Next Big Trade Meeting.

President Pennock, in delivering his address to the Society of American Florists at Kansas City, struck the keynote of the organized meetings of the florists' industry when he said: "Today we come together with one main object in view, to improve our minds and benefit by our meetings in order to elevate and improve our business. Business first, then pleasure afterwards."

The next big meeting in the florists' industry will be held in Baltimore October 10 to 12. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association will hold its annual business meeting on these dates.

It is doubtful if all of its members have a clear conception of the magnitude of this association. From an organization in 1912 of fifty-seven members it has grown in one decade to a membership of 2,400 live-wire retail florists of this country and Canada, transacting a yearly volume of business in the neighborhood of ten millions of dollars. This is a rough outline of the organization.

Each Member's Share.

In order that an organization of this size and activity may function properly, work must be done. It is the duty of every member to do his share of this work. In the past the burden has been carried by a few men, and they deserve credit for the organization they have built up. But men like President Breitmeyer, Secretary Pochelon and Treasurer Rock, and in fact the entire board of directors, want every member, no matter how humble he may be, to become interested in the workings of this institution. We are told in the Scriptures: "Where a man's treasure is, there will his heart be." The lead-

"Ain't Never Wuz"

All of us are familiar with the story of the old farmer who, after looking at a giraffe, shook his head with determination and declared: "There ain't never wuz no such an animal."

There is another story of more recent vintage that is equally convincing.
A recently engaged girl was trying to introduce her lover to her very deaf grandfather.
The man's name was Faegeinspugle.
After having it shouted several times in his ear, he finally shook his head discouragedly and said: "It's no use, I can't get it. Sounds like Faegeinspugle."

Isn't it so, that so many of the things that are so, are so much so, that we refuse to believe it?
Sometimes you and I go far afield trying to dig up a wonderful idea, when the ones we have always had would work like a clock if we only had sense enough to wind them up and give the pendulum a little push.

There's the F. T. D., for example.
Wound it up lately?

ers of this organization realize the truth that is contained in this verse from the Bible. They would ask every member to sit down and go over his books, and cast up the amount of telegraph business he has transacted in the past year, and then remember that the greater part of this business would not have been on his books but for the existence of the F. T. D.

When we consider that there are some florists in this country who, in spite of the publicity given it by the trade press, do not know what F. T. D. stands for, and then think of the number of inhabitants of this country and Canada who have never heard of it, and learn that despite this handicap it is transacting such a vast volume of business, it is readily seen that the possibilities of telegraph service, with the proper education of the public, are stupendous.

The public must be educated in telegraph delivery service. There is no one to impart this education but the florists themselves. Don't lose sight of the fact that in order to disseminate education the one doing it must first know his subject. This is the reason the officers and board of directors of the F. T. D. ask for a record attendance in Baltimore. Then there are other reasons.

Work to Be Done.

When we consider the mushroom growth of this association we can readily see that it has outgrown the original by-laws and constitution. This is a big public service corporation, handling a vast amount of the public's money annually. This must be safeguarded. The business meeting is the proper place to work out and incorporate amendments that will throw every guarantee around F. T. D. transactions. Another important item is a more perfect organization. J. F. Ammann has been working on this since the first of last May. At the Baltimore meeting every district will be thoroughly organized and officered, these district officers reporting direct to the president's and secretary's offices. When this organization is completed, the entire society will function like a well lubricated piece of machinery.

can think of none why you shouldn't.

Your scribe lives in Baltimore, and he knows of the preparations that are being made there. Last May, at the directors' meeting in Detroit, Vice-president Feast was told not to let entertainment interfere with the meetings the first two days, but he could go as far as he liked on the third. Well, the Baltimore florists have gone the limit. Am not going to tell what this is to be, but let me give you a hint: Come prepared to spend three days if you can, and then some, for they are not going to get that program of entertainment into twenty-four hours. Your trip to Baltimore in October is going to be one of profit and enjoyment. R. T. P.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale market was in an overcrowded condition all last week. Dull business prevailed with the retailers in all lines, except funeral work, which was heavy all week. Much seasonable stock arrives every day and low prices are charged in order to move the unusually large consignments of gladioli, asters, single-flowering tuberoses and short-stemmed roses.

J. Pluvius is still in obscurity; only occasional rains came during the summer. Roses are arriving in better condition and some splendid Columbia, Premier and Ophelia were noted last week. The fancy grades in these clear pretty well. Good carnations are scarce. The demand is not equal to the arrivals of asters.

Valley and Easter lilies are not too plentiful and, when good, are cleaned out daily. Large consignments of outdoor flowers are among the daily arrivals, such as dahlias, cosmos, tuberoses, hydrangeas, delphiniums and gypsophila.

Growers Hold Picnic.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held its ninth annual picnic at Lake Hill park Thursday, August 24. Lake Hill park is a beautiful spot, with plenty of fine fishing and boating, and the bathers had the time of their lives. The only thing marring the pleasure was the heat.

The attendance was not so large as is usual on these occasions. Still, considering the distance and heat, the city and county were well represented. The program was well arranged and many excellent prizes were offered by the St. Louis Florists' Club, the St. Louis Seed Co., St. Louis Pottery Co., American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., A. L. Randall Co., Missouri Pottery Co. and the eight St. Louis wholesale houses.

The horseshoe pitching contest was won by Paul Ahner, and Gustave Hartmann won second. Other games were won as follows:

Ladies' walk—Mrs. Reinhardt, first; Miss Emma Gross, second.

Boys' race, under 12 years—Vernon Goebel, first; Harold Hoeh, second.

Pot-breaking contest, for married ladies—Mrs. Robert Ladley, first; Mrs. W. A. Rowe, second.

Girls' race, 12 years—Miss L. Dressek, first; Hilda Tauther, second.

Girls' race, under 10 years—Miss B. Swenson, first; Miss Lorraine Rowe, second.

Boys' sack race, 12 years—Albert Hoeh, first; Harold Hoeh, second.

Peanut race for girls, 12 years—Miss D. Elebrecht, first; Miss W. Geders, second.

Peanut race for married ladies—Mrs. Horman, first; Mrs. Sanabach, second.

The men's novelty race had a long list of entries and each won a prize of some kind. Paul Ahner won a safety razor; George Kuehner, a knife; J. J. Beneke, a safety razor; George Pieser, a growler; Frank Windler, a fishing line; W. A. Rowe, a grass hook; W. J. Pilcher, a tin cup, and W. C. Smith, a paper of pins.

The event of the day came next—the tug of war. Two teams, ten on each, were selected by Carl Swenson and Gustave Hartmann. After a hard 20-minute pull, Gustave Hartmann's team was declared winner.

During the evening the young folks enjoyed dancing, boating and bathing in the lake.

The officers of this association are: President, Thomas Kirkwood, Jr.; vice-president, Gerard Denys; secretary-treasurer, Joseph Deutschmann. The Trustees are Carl Swenson, Phil J. Goebel and Harry Wagner. All were present at the picnic and worked hard for its success.

houses of the W. A. Rowe Floral Co. Ladies are invited.

Various Notes.

The old quarters of the C. Young & Sons Co., at 1406 Olive street, are undergoing many changes. The new firm will be known as Young's the Florist, Inc. The officers of the firm are: President, Walter J. Young; vice-president, W. J. Harvey; secretary-treasurer, A. J. Fuchs. The old store, for the last fifty years known as a leading retail establishment, is being remodeled and redecorated under the supervision of W. J. Harvey, who, until recently, was with Grimm & Gorly. The new firm is building a branch west end store at the corner of Taylor street and Delmar avenue. This will be opened early in October. The firm is a member of the F. T. D.

Adolph Steidle, son of John Steidle, who has been with F. H. Weber the last few years, has bought the M. D. Newman Flower Shop from Miss Julia Armstrong. This was opened about twenty-six years ago by Miss Newman, who came from Boston. Miss Newman died in 1919 and in her will left the store to Miss Armstrong, who was with her all those years. Miss Armstrong is the daughter of Luther Armstrong, of Kirkwood, who says she will take a long-needed rest for at least a year. Mr. Steidle will take charge September 1.

W. A. Rowe, Oscar C. May and the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. exhibited at the Missouri state fair and won several large prizes. Henry Schlechter had charge of the display for the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., and Mr. May and Mr. Rowe had personal charge prietors of the Blossom Shop, have returned from their vacation trip, which was spent at Pine View cottage, in the Ozarks. Miss Heinzelmann was in charge during their absence. They report a delightful time.

The "Say It with Flowers" bowling league will start its season September 6, at the Grand and Arsenal alleys, with six full teams. The Carnations will meet the Roses; the Daisies, the Violets, and the Orchids, the Sweet Peas. J. J. B.

ATLANTA, GA.

Plan Flower Show.

The proposed flower show has taken definite form and at a meeting of the exhibitors held at the Auditorium the afternoon of August 25 steps were taken to hold the exhibit on either the first three days of November or November 22 to 24

The famous Atlanta spirit was never better exemplified than at the meeting, each one present volunteering to his brother grower and dealer anything necessary to make each booth an individual show in itself. About twenty of the growers and dealers have taken space and it is confidently expected that not a single florist will be missing when the lights flash on for the opening. No admission fees will be charged for this year's show and it is only a question of how the anticipated crowds will be taken care of. The entire membership of the schools of Atlanta will be invited.

An exhibit that will appeal to both professionals and amateurs will be the plants of one of the private estates in Atlanta, which is the most comprehensive in the south and one of the finest in the country.

Due to the lack of time, growers are not able to grow for prizes and no judging will be done, but every man in the houses is looking forward to a year from this fall for the big southern show.

All communications regarding space should be addressed to S. S. Gibbs, chairman flower show committee, Rhodes building, Atlanta. Warning is issued to all that space is limited and that it is a case of first come, first served.

Various Notes.

Miss Ethel Milican, of Dahl's, has returned from her vacation, spent at Hot Springs, Ark., and Miss Nora Wilson, of the same firm, is now taking her turn at the same springs. Miss Wilson will return after Labor day.

Because Monday, September 4, is Labor day, the regular monthly meeting of the Atlanta Florists' and Horticulturists' Club will meet Wednesday, September 6.

of a popular man, the entire store was taken up with floral decorations and it was practically impossible to enter.

With the close of the vacation season, practically all have returned to their duties, each refreshed and looking forward to a busy and prosperous fall, which, if the past so-called dull season is any indicator, will be the best in years and one of the best that the florists have ever known. Last Sunday at closing time the boxes in the different stores looked as though they were meant for a different purpose than flowers. Many of the stores reported that they had not enough stock to take care of the trade. With the return of the miners to work and with some prospects of coal being forthcoming, a little easier feeling has come to some of those whose supplies have become depleted and whose orders have been refused.

Confirmation has been received of the acceptance of Irving Greshem's challenge by Tom Joy and the great golf match is scheduled to come off the early part of September. S. S. Gibbs and Rollin Lyons are also getting in a lot of practice for this event and anticipate being in the running. No report has been heard from D. C. Horgan, of Macon, but acceptance is expected every mail and it begins to look as though some excitement will be "on tap" when the date is finally settled.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

There was a slight improvement in trade last week and there has been an increase in funeral work. Asters are becoming more plentiful and the quality is much improved. Gladioli are still in the ascendency and are cheap. Sweet peas are scarce and poor in quality. Garden flowers are still plentiful. Statice and gypsophila are plentiful.

Lilies of the valley are excellent in quality, but the supply is limited. There is a great demand for flowering plants, but there are more to be had. Cut asparagus is scarce.

Various Notes.

George T. Boucher is getting ready for his display at the flower show at Exposition park, September 4 to 9.

Hassett the Florist is still disposing of large quantities of gladioli at the Unique Flower Shop.

The prize cups for the flower show at the Rochester exposition, September 4, were on exhibit at H. E. Wilson's Main street store last week. They are: Silver cup for cut dahlias, donated by J. B. Keller Sons; silver cup for cut asters, donated by James Vick's Sons; silver cup for cut gladioli, donated by H. E. Wilson; silver cup for cut zinnias, donated by George T. Boucher; silver cup for assortment of cut flowers, donated by Hart & Vick. In addition there will be cash prizes given. George Cramer is busy getting the hall in readiness for the exhibit.

George Kirshaw, of Canandaigua, N. Y., was a visitor here last week. Other visitors were Stephen Green, Philadelphia; S. M. Clapper, of the Zanesville Pottery Co., Zanesville, O., and O. C. Graham, of the Cambridge Glass Co., New York. E. C. A.

WORCESTER, MASS.

Flowers are plentiful, but buyers are scarce. The cool weather prevailing brought some improvement. Dahlias are being used for decorations and a large number of the erect type are being sold to casual customers. Asters of medium quality are on the market in immense quantities, thousands going to the garbage cans. Few asters of exhibition size are seen this season. Weddings are numerous, but the demand for decorations for these is small.

Many varieties of autumn flowers are late and the growers who handle these are comforted with the expectation of the brisk demand which always occurs right after Labor day. The high price of bulbs is deterring the growers of

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Last week showed a decided improvement in business; stock cleared well. Easter lilies have been much in demand, while gladioli, asters and roses have moved nicely. Poorer stock has been wasted, but all good stock is disposed of. Asters are not quite so good in quality at present as they were previously.

Sweet peas are over and carnations have not put in an appearance. Valley has advanced in price and the call for it is spasmodic. Dahlias are beginning to arrive and some excellent stock is to be seen. Tritomas are now arriving and have been clearing nicely. Some exceptionally good, large marigolds are appearing and the demand has been much larger than the supply.

The Market.

The market is much more stable than it was some time ago. Quantities of asters and gladioli continue to arrive. Asters are improved in quality. Easter lilies were exceptionally scarce the first of last week, but toward the end of the week there were plenty.

The rose crop continues to improve. A few carnations arrive and they move out daily. Plenty of outdoor arrivals are here; the demand is not equal to them.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Short-stemmed roses are plentiful, as they are cut from the young stock. These grades are bringing $2 per hundred. The better stock of roses brings as high as $12 to $15 per hundred. Columbia, Premier and Butterfly are among the best at this time.

Gladioli sold a little better last week, with prices ranging from $2 to $5 per hundred. Many days there was not a sufficient supply of good flowers to meet the demand. America, Panama, Pendleton and Francis King are leaders. Cool weather has shortened the supply. Large quantities of gladioli are beginning to come in from northern points and the quality is usually good.

Asters are better this year than they were last year and some of the local stock last week brought as high as $5 and $6 per hundred. The latter is extra fine. Most of the asters are bringing from $2 to $4 per hundred.

Dahlias are coming in more plentifully, with prices running on an average of $2 per hundred. The prospect for a large crop of dahlias around Washington is not good; some of the growers report partial failure of the crop.

Delphinium has been coming into the market in heavy lots and the supply exceeds the demand. The quality of the stock offered is good. The price ranges from 25 cents per bunch for the short-stemmed stock to 55 cents and $1 per bunch for the longer spikes.

Zinnias are extra fine just now and $4 per hundred is easily obtained. The shorter grades of poorer quality are bringing $1 and $2 per hundred. Rubrum lilies are finding little or no sale and they move slowly. Gladioli are so cheap just now that they easily take the place of rubrum lilies in funeral work.

T. N. S.

DENVER, COLO.

The Market.

Business has been slow for the last few weeks. The railroad strike is making worse what would naturally be a bad time. Most of the outdoor stock offered is of good quality, but thousands of fine gladioli, the kind that last year met a regular demand, are going to the trash heap. Shippers are probably even faring worse than the local stores.

There is a fair supply of good roses and these can be expected to come in more heavily and better from now on. Carnations are small and scarcely belong in the running.

POINSETTIA TYPES.

Will you kindly explain the difference between the California type and true Christmas red poinsettia? These are two distinct types and, in order to avoid confusion, should be offered under separate names.

Last year we bought stock which produced blooms of a pinkish red and a tall growth, and the bracts began shattering before Christmas. We are in the market for some of the true, old-fashioned bright red, but are at a loss to know how to order and feel sure of getting this type. W. B.—Ga.

You are quite right in your statement that these two types of poinsettias should be offered under separate names, so that a buyer would know exactly what he is going to get. Reference to the Classified columns of The Review will show that most of those firms offering poinsettias do so distinguish one type from the other. All should do so. By buying your plants from a firm which offers stock of true Christmas red, you will obtain what you want.

BUTTING VS. LAPPING GLASS.

We are building a new greenhouse and should like to have you tell how to set the glass. Is it preferable to have the panes lap or butt each other on the sashbars? The glass we intend to use is 16x18 inches. G. F. C.—Idaho.

The glass in the roof should be lapped, but care should be taken that the lap does not exceed one-eighth of an inch. When a wide lap is made, not only is the glass wasted, but, what is more important, it often leads to the cracking of the glass by the formation of ice between the panes. It is also objectionable because the soot and dust which collect where the panes are lapped shade the house, and in the winter time this is a serious fault. Before laying the glass a layer of putty should be spread on the sashbars, and zinc brads should be driven one inch above the lower corners of each pane and one-eighth of an inch below the upper corners. When the next pane is laid the lower corners should rest against the upper brads of the pane below, thus preventing its sliding down. Of course the glass should be pressed firmly down on the sashbars and all surplus putty scraped off. A coat of paint should be applied to hold the putty. The glass in the vertical walls of a greenhouse should be butted.

L. R. T.

MAKING PUTTY.

Kindly give me the formula for making greenhouse putty.

Y. S. H.—S. D.

It is presumed that you wish to know the formula for making liquid putty. A good formula for mixing this material is one-third lard oil and two-thirds linseed oil, with enough whiting mixed in to produce the consistency desired. The whiting should be sifted through a sieve or other strainer to eliminate all foreign properties which frequently get into it. The body of the material should be stiff enough so that it will remain on the sashbars when applied. The temperature of the atmosphere at the time of applying the putty will be a governing factor. It is best to make the putty a little too stiff and then add about a teaspoonful of Japan dryer to each pint of the material. The dryer should not be added, however, until you are ready to use the putty. There are a number of ready-mixed putties advertised in The Review each week.

Buy Another Book Today

Many of the most successful business men in the trade had little schooling—but they practically all are readers—they read The Review each week and they buy books frequently. Such men are self-educated—theirs is knowledge gleaned by reading.

It is the mission of The Review to assist its subscribers in every way to improve their knowledge of the trade and their knowledge in other fields of human interest. As a measure of co-operation The Review has added to its services to subscribers a book purchasing service. This department, of course, specializes on books pertaining to the business of florists, nurserymen and seedsmen, but in addition will secure for subscribers, without charge for its service, any book they want, of any nature.

If you want a book of any given title, The Review will get it for you. Or if you want a book on any certain subject, The Review will send you the titles, with prices, of all the books on that subject.

Look over the list in the appended coupon. Most of these are standard books by well known authors. Order the one which seems, from its title, most nearly to concern your special interests. When you have read it carefully, order another.

Put a cross opposite the books you want. Clip the coupon and send it to us with a check to cover cost. Books will be forwarded, postpaid, without delay.

Oakland, Cal.—F. W. Scott, of 1941 Ninety-fourth avenue, is entering the trade.

Le Grande, Ore.—A. B. Cherry has had excellent success with the Crusader rose and recently received a nice write-up in the Evening Observer because he placed a vase of them on the editor's desk. That gentleman said their presence "purified the mind" of every worker in the office.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

An abundance of stock is being sent into the market and a fairly good demand is noted. Last week the attendance early in the morning was good and little good stock was left over. Zinnias, asters, dahlias and gladioli are the leaders in cheap stock.

Roses are especially scarce on the market, although wholesalers have a fair supply in their stores. Small flowers are poor and consequently in poor demand. Greens favor the buyer. Retailers report a good demand for funeral work and wholesalers say their local demand is well up to the average, though the shipping business is still poor.

Various Notes.

Douglas Fraser, of Fraser & Son, Pasadena, writes: "Our store will be completed by September 1 and we expect to have our entire establishment in full swing by September 15." This has certainly been quick action and is in line with the policy of the firm. Mr. Fraser also writes that the flower seed crops at the firm's growing quarters are most promising this season.

F. C. Jaeger, of F. C. Jaeger & Son, San Francisco, left August 22 for home, going by way of Turlock. Mr. Jaeger expressed himself as greatly pleased with his visit.

Polder Bros. are bringing in some pretty zinnias, both of the giant-flowered type and the baby or midget-flowered. Although there are lots of zinnias on the market unsold, John Polder sells out daily, the reason being that the colors are good and the bunches so arranged that every flower shows at its best.

Howard Gates, of Anaheim, has been showing a pretty creamy yellow gladiolus, Flora, around the market; it has the earmarks of a good seller. Of course, as in the case of yellow carnations or yellow any-other-flower except mums or daffodils, the old Scotch verdict of "not proven" applies. Mr. Gates says that business is good.

Nicholas Gondolfo, of the Los Angeles Evergreen Co., finished his vacation by a business trip to San Francisco and the north, but Joseph Perotti says he is going to finish his vacation with a little deer hunting later in the season.

A. F. Borden and F. Reymond, of the Redondo Floral Co., both had to be called back from their vacations, on account of business being too good to be taken care of, but Mr. Borden says that his next trip will be to Baltimore for the convention of the F. T. D. There he will not hear the sweet strains of "I hear you calling me."

Among visitors last week were William R. Hogel and wife, of Globe, Ariz., and Mrs. McDonald, of the Potter Floral Co., El Paso, Tex. R. Plues, of the E. C. Amling Co., piloted these visitors about.

A carload of baskets from the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., is expected at the store of the E. C. Amling Co. in time for fall trade.

F. Gerkin says that business is coming along finely on West Washington street and that the new store building will soon be completed. Mrs. Gerkin is still in Europe.

The store of George Hall & Co. is being repainted and decorated in preparation for fall business.

J. Gorini, of the Artesia Nurseries, says that Angelo Tassano will return from Italy this fall, but that his brother, Dominic, will stay there. Angelo will return to Italy later and will bring his wife and child to America.

The pageant of progress opening at Exposition park will be a big thing for business generally. A look around the place shows everything well advanced. Howard & Smith and C. E. Gutting, of the Superior Nurseries, have two of the trade booths here.

J. D. Eisele, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, visited the trade last week.

Roy F. Wilcox returned last week from the Kansas City convention. While he reports an exceptionally good time, the cool nights of California seemed good to him on his return.

The Market.

"Swamped with stock," describes the local market, but considerable satisfaction is derived from the fact that the surplus is caused by the enormous supply of flowers on the market rather than a slump in business. The possibility of a railroad embargo has naturally caused a certain amount of anxiety among the shippers, but reports in the trade indicate that no actual loss of business has been experienced to date. All shipments are taken at the owners' risk, but no cases have been reported of non-delivery so far. With the heavy chrysanthemum shipping season getting under way, it is hoped transportation difficulties will be speedily cleared up. Chrysanthemum shipping has come to mean more and more to the California trade year after year. It would mean a heavy loss if shipments could not be made this fall. The quality of the blooms leaves nothing to be desired and there is this year a heavy crop, which the local market could not possibly absorb, especially in view of the fact that other large flowers are at their height. There are quantities of gladioli, dahlias, asters and zinnias, as well as other outdoor stock, to vie with the heavy offerings of chrysanthemums. It is pointed out that the problem of so much competing stock in season at once is coming to demand more and more attention each year. This is largely due to the earlier arrival of the mum crop and the rapid development of the dahlia into a commercial flower. Formerly asters and gladioli were well out of the way before the chrysanthemum season started, whereas this year everything is in full crop at once. Heavy shipping to outside points seems to be the only solution, and rapid development in this direction is mapped out by the local trade for the next few years.

Good roses have been scarce. Russell makes the best showing, although some good Columbia are also coming in. Rubrum lilies are a feature of the market. Valley has been quite plentiful.

The Dahlia Show.

Extensive preparations have been completed for the seventh annual exhibition of the Dahlia Society of California, to be held at the Palace hotel, August 31 to September 2. It is expected that more than 200 dahlia growers will exhibit.

Each year since its inception in 1916 the dahlia show has grown in importance and has been productive of larger entries and new types of flowers. The show this year will have a far wider range in hybrid types of dahlias than in any other show. Carl Salbach, president of the society, states that the educational campaign on the growth and production and hybridization of the dahlia has been the cause of the great increase in new types. Ever since the organization of the society, in 1916, the members have carefully studied the production of dahlias and the results are now being made apparent.

Exhibits for the 1922 show are coming from all over the state of California, and a grower from Ashland, Ore., has requested space for his flowers. Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and other southern points will exhibit collectively, staging their stock as an exhibit from the Southern California Dahlia Society.

Frank D. Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., among a number of other seedlings, will display a beautiful vermilion-colored pompon, believed to be one of the smallest dahlias ever cultivated. The color is especially brilliant and this, together with its diminutive size, prompted Carl Cropp, of Chicago, immediately to say it ought to be called "Red Riding Hood."

In order to stimulate interest among new devotees of the dahlia, Secretary

The New Wonder Fern

NOW READY IN 2-INCH POTS, AT

$30.00 per 100

This magnificent fern is now so well known that no description is necessary. We sold out completely this spring and those who were disappointed in obtaining stock have now their opportunity.

For cutting it is absolutely the best variety in cultivation. Fronds sent from Los Angeles to Indianapolis on the occasion of the National Flower Show were awarded a Silver Medal. This speaks volumes for its keeping qualities and it is the freest grower of all Adiantums, the fronds frequently attaining a length of 24 inches under ordinary cultivation.

H. T. Hennig has announced a special prize for the best display by an amateur who has never before exhibited in any show. The exhibit is to be composed of a dozen different types of dahlias. A number of new exhibitors have already entered for this prize.

This year's show committee is headed by Carl Salbach. Working with him are William Kettlewell, Richard Lohrman, Mrs. Jessie Seal, Mrs. E. W. Lymbery, H. T. Hennig, F. D. Pelicano, F. C. Burns, J. W. Davis, Arthur Twitchett, R. McWhirter and G. Nieborger.

Various Notes.

Finishing touches are being put on the quarters just off Geary street on Powell street, which, upon completion, will be occupied by Clarence McLaughlin, under the name of the Smart Shop Florist. Across the street is the Art Floral Co., and there are several other florists' shops in the immediate vicinity of the location selected by Mr. McLaughlin, but he thinks there will be plenty of business for all. He has had ten years' experience in the florists' business and will have his place nicely fitted up.

The Art Floral Co. is now about settled in its new quarters at 247 Powell street, two doors south of its former location. The new place provides more space and better facilities for displaying stock and filling orders.

Carl Cropp, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, is visiting San Francisco, in the course of a coast tour. He plans to visit Santa Barbara county and Los Angeles.

There is interest, in Marin county, in reclaiming tide land marsh acreage by erecting low dams, to keep out the salt water. This land is often quite fertile. Adjoining some of this low-lying land, at Kentfield, one of the beauty spots of the county, the Richard Diener Co. has tracts of gladioli, petunias, etc., that all summer have been arousing the admiration of many thousands of passing motorists.

Friends of Mrs. R. E. Darbee report having received post cards from her, stating that she is touring in Italy, by automobile, and having a splendid time. Relatives of San Francisco growers in Genoa and on the Riviera have been giving the Darbee family a warm welcome, members of the Rossi family especially.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is beginning to cut its fall rose crop, just when roses are quite scarce and in demand. P. D. Mortensen states that the company is beginning to ship chrysanthemums east. E. W. McLellan, after renewing many friendships at Kansas City, started home August 22.

J. A. Axell is handling many roses, but he says his trade could take more, if they were available. Mr. Axell considers that the flood of asters, this season, injured the business. E. F. Axell has returned, with his bride, from the east.

The San Francisco Coöperative Flower Market will take bids until September 8 for the rights of shipping and consignment. Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., stated that there would be keen competition for these privileges. Charles Brown, of Brown & Kennedy, the newly elected president of the market, said that the general policy of the coöperative undertaking will not be changed.

Angelo Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., was a judge in the bathing girl contest. He was the supervisor asked to perform this task, because he is known to have a keen eye for beautiful things.

Bab Pagano, of Avansino Bros. & Co., is the proud father of a fine boy. This firm has been featuring some new dahlias, raised for show purposes.

The St. Francis Hotel Flower Shop has had considerable business as a result of the many conventions held recently in this city. Orders included decorations for 125 tables during the fire chiefs' convention and 100 tables when the Commonwealth Club entertained Chief Justice William H. Taft, who attended the convention of the American Bar Association. Julius Eppstein has just bought a new touring car.

F. C. Jaeger, Jr., visited the growers of chrysanthemums a few days ago, in several of the growing sections. "I believe that this year's mum crop is the finest we have ever had," he reported.

The store of the Olympic Florist, a new and attractive little establishment, was opened for business August 19. It is almost a stone's throw from the great George Duffy, of Joseph's staff, is away on a vacation, hunting deer in the mountains. Joseph's had all the floral decorations, bouquets, etc., for the White House fashion show, one of the big events of the style season.

Podesta & Baldocchi have been busy with funeral work, part of it for the late Colonel Harris Weinstock, well known merchant and former state director of markets, who died as the result of a fall from his horse. Podesta & Baldocchi put what is believed to be the biggest florists' delivery van in this city into commission August 23.

The Charles C. Navlet Co. is devoting its windows to two flower shows, one of gladioli and the other of pompon chrysanthemums. A. D. Cowdray stated that this is done to sell bulbs and plants for future delivery, and always proves more effective than using catalogues. As there is a great assortment of the flowers, varieties are shown in rotation. Many orders are coming in for bulbs and plants as a result.

J. Gonzawa, for twelve years with Darling's Shop, Los Angeles, has assumed the position of office manager for Domoto Bros.

Enomoto & Co., as well as several other firms, will begin shipping chrysanthemums about September 1. S. Enomoto is enthusiastic regarding the size of the crops and the quality of the chrysanthemums this year. The firm is now cutting Chrysolora and October Frost.

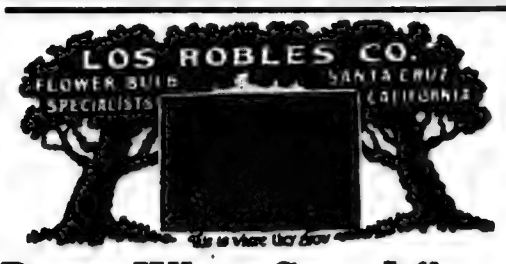
Miss Gertrude Gilfether, with the United Flower & Supply Co., has returned from a vacation spent on the Russian river. The company believes that the prices for chrysanthemums this year will be somewhat lower than they were last year, but that the quality will be the best seen for some time.

F. C. Jaeger & Son have featured a window display which has caused many pedestrians on Powell street to "stop, look and admire." Leaning against the side of the window is a large map of the United States, showing the state boundaries and the leading cities. The latter are indicated by little, colored electric lights, from each of which is a streamer running to the window glass, where a sticker gives the name of an F. T. D. florist in that particular city. Neat window cards make such suggestions as "Send home a box of chrysanthemums," and explain how an order can be placed here in San Francisco and forwarded to the east to the florist in any of the cities indicated, who in turn will make delivery to any address, the same as if the order were placed locally. A gorgeous display of chrysanthemums helps to drive home the idea. M. M.

DOUBLE VIOLETS.

What is the name of the darkest purple double violet possessing fragrance? I have bought plants from several firms and find that violets of the same name do not always grow the same. Where can I obtain plants true to name?

Can you tell me anything of the Parnell violet? A. A. F.—Cal.



I do not know the Parnell violet. Perhaps some other readers of The Review may be acquainted with it.

Marie Louise is still the best dark blue, sweet-scented double violet in commerce. You will find plants of this violet advertised in The Review in the Classified section. This violet is much grown by the many successful specialists in the noted Rhinebeck district of New York. Lady Hume Campbell is a free-flowering double, but it is much paler in color than Marie Louise. C. W.

The houses are 2 years old and in good condition. Would it be possible for you to tell us what kind of help and what number it would take to run a place of this size, growing for wholesale and retail trade? G. G. C.—S. D.

If the writer could spend a few days on your place, while in operation, he could probably tell you whether it is overmanned or undermanned; whether it is being managed efficiently and, if not, where the lost motion is. Every place presents its own problems, which confront the management at every turn, and on your ability to cope with them will depend the efficiency of your working force. Without a knowledge of these, the writer can give you no definite statement as to the size of the force you should have to conduct your establishment.

Assuming that your establishment presents no unusual difficulties; that your coal is delivered to your bins; that your soil supply is close at hand; that you use city water; that a supply of manure is available, etc., it is estimated that you will need a superintendent, who might be yourself; three men capable of doing general greenhouse work, including the watering; one night fireman, one day fireman, who would assist in the labor about the place; one laborer, one teamster, who would assist with the labor, and a delivery man, who would assist with the labor in his spare time.

Such a force could probably handle your place efficiently and place the product at the disposal of your retail sales force or in the express office for shipment. Your retail force would be in addition to the above-mentioned force and would depend on the territory you cover and the plan of your operations.

THE fall bulb lists are appearing rapidly.

S. F. LEONARD, Chicago, will celebrate his seventieth birthday anniversary Labor day, September 4.

HOLLAND bulb exporters find, to the surprise of many of them, that they must fill their American orders on a rising market.

A. H. SMITH, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, who is making a tour of the New England states, is expected to arrive home this week.

THE official roster of the Robert Nicholson Seed Co., Dallas, Tex., is as follows: President, Robert Nicholson; vice-president and treasurer, N. Leslie Kelley; secretary, James S. Adams.

To secure early orders, Walter E. Cook, Inc., Cleveland, encloses a coupon with the fall bulb catalogue entitling a purchaser of $5 or more worth of bulbs to a dollar's worth extra if his order is placed by September 10.

IN the storm that did much damage in and about Chicago August 24, lightning struck the warehouse of H. Jones, near Evanston, and destroyed the onion sets therein. The building was burned down before firemen arrived, and a loss of $25,000 is reported to have been sustained.

AMONG recent visitors to Chicago were Philip Landreth and Burnett Landreth, Jr., of the Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa. Messrs. Landreth have been making a tour of the west in a "search for higher prices," as one seedsman expressed it. So far they have found the western market's outlook "quite bullish."

THE partnership heretofore existing between G. Edward Schultz and Lewis T. Miller, doing business as G. Edward Schultz & Co., at 304 Tenth street, northwest, Washington, D. C., has been dissolved. The business will be conducted by Lewis T. Miller under the same firm name for the present. Mr. Schultz is no longer a partner in the business.

PRODUCED IN GREAT BRITAIN.

By Watkins & Simpson.

Most American florists are acquainted with the name of Watkins & Simpson, Ltd., one of the largest seed houses of Great Britain, for many buy from this firm the seed for which they send across the water. While its offices are in London, its trial grounds are at Feltham and Twickenham, and cover more than 100 acres. Some description of the firm's specialties there appeared in a recent issue of the Horticultural Trade Journal, published in London. Regarding the specialties the article says in part:

"Antirrhinums are a famous specialty of Watkins & Simpson. Nanum was the first type to come under our notice and it included splendid strains of Black Prince, the dark crimson; Queen of the North, a useful white; Nelrose—this famous variety seems to be gaining a deeper shade of coral pink, adding to its attractiveness; Rosebud, bright rose pink with white throat, is very effective; also, Electra, of sunset shading—so popular today—salmon, maize and orange. We were greatly impressed with Flame, a most beautiful shade of orange scarlet, coming true. It is described as a good late, especially suitable for massed bedding. Next came the grandiflorum type in a bewildering array of varieties, too many to describe in detail. Prima Donna, the well known terra cotta pink and yellow, showed up well and was of fine selection. The newer varieties included Empress, a true crimson with a strong and compact habit and early flowering. Climax, also early flowering, is a happy combination of orange and gold and is beautiful. Gloria was also in fine trim; its prettily frilled large flowers of rich rose against the foliage were attractive. A little further along was Enchantress, paler in shade, but forming an agreeable toning of pink. It is described as almond blossom pink and the description fits it well. The flowers are large and growth is upright.

"Among the yellows Golden Monarch took our eye. These are but a fraction of the newer varieties. The type was everything to be desired, the result of constant selection. Majus included good strains of Fairy Queen and Rose Doré. In the majus grandiflorum type we, of course, saw Harmony, the firm's 1922 novelty. It is really a beautiful introduction; the color is rich terra-cotta rose and gold merged together, a delightful harmony, which the beautiful frilled flowers accentuate. Another variety of great merit is Rose King, carmine rose. There were three pinks in this type that were especially nice and which we placed in our opinion in the following order of merit: Rose King, new, has no white throat or lip, rich self; Pink Beauty, large flowers, rosy pink self, nice habit, and Feltham Beauty, rose and white. Orange Beauty and Torchlight are good orange varieties; Crimson King is best for crimson; Queen Victoria, for white, and Primrose King, for yellow.

Stocks a Specialty.

"Stocks are one of Mr. Watkins' favorite flowers and they are a big feature at Twickenham. Before the war the selection of choice strains was largely in the hands of the Germans, but, with the new order of things, Watkins & Simpson are in the fore front and they make it their proud boast that their collections of stock seeds, separate colors, are all British strains. There in the beds can be seen rows of ten-week, large-flowered, in all the well known shades. Watkins & Simpson have advanced a long way on the road to secure uniformity of flowering period for each variety, which is so essential. The percentage of doubles is high. Then there is the well known Princess Alice, Column White and Giant Perfection stocks, all of splendid high selection. The firm has in this selection a canary yellow, exceedingly true, besides other shades equally good. Then we came upon Snowdrift, a mammoth stock of Mr. Watkins' own raising, a variety every florist should grow, especially for design work. It comes with a high percentage of doubles, is extremely floriferous and exceedingly white. The pyramidal stocks in separate colors show in the main high percentages of doubles. Among this type the Beautiful Queen of the Belgians was gorgeous. All the Year Round was hardly as forward as some, but its fine, dwarf, compact habit and extended cutting period make it one of the best for market purposes. The wallflower-leaved stocks were also showing well, but were not in bloom when we inspected them.

"To describe the varied strains of each of the many annuals in detail would take too long, so we must confine ourselves to just a few outstanding items, although every subject was productive of interest. Candytuft Rose Cardinal viewed in the bed is wonder-

SNAPDRAGON

BE WISE and have a big supply of Snapdragon the coming winter. There's a reason. Coal will be scarce and high; carnation plants are of poor quality and scarce, and bulb stock, particularly Paper Whites, will be high. Get busy and have a lot of seedling snapdragons ready to fill all empty space. Seed may be sown any time. Plants should be ready to bench in from 60 to 75 days.

New Gladiolus GLENDALE

Exhibited as seedling No. 444. Winner of first prize for best three stalks, any color, and second prize for best twelve stalks, any color, at the American Gladiolus Society Exhibition, Kalamazoo, Mich., August 16-17. Also received award of merit at Illinois State Florists' Ass'n exhibition at Central States Fair and Exposition Aug. 24-25.

"Glendale" is an entirely new color in gladiolus, being neither red nor purple, generally called dark cerise, but more properly described as magenta shading to cerise in center. The flowers open out full, on long, straight, stiff stems. It is very prolific in bulblets.

Wherever exhibited it has been pointed out first of all by thousands of visitors as "the most beautiful Gladiolus, just like velvet." The ladies all seem to use the same expression at first sight of it, therefore it gives us great satisfaction to be able to make it possible for all growers to get a start of a variety certain to be a favorite.

Only a very limited number of bulbs to be distributed this fall to introduce them, and positively not more than one dozen to any one customer. Price, $1.00 each; $10.00 per dozen, same as "Elora."

Both varieties are certain to be leaders in future and are alone in their colors. Every grower should get a start of them and not sell any of the increase until well stocked with them, discarding old inferior varieties.

fully attractive; it is deep rosy, about six inches high and is admirable for carpet bedding; its color is cardinal, quite distinct. Calliopsis, Tom Thumb Beauty, is yellow with cream center. The apple scent of Geranium odoratissimum is nice and the plants were making fine headway, considering they were only spring-sown. The poppy beds were beginning to glow with color, from the scarlet of the Flanders poppy to the beautiful shrimp pink peony-flowered, which includes a goodly variety of shades. The Golden Feathers were featured in select types, but it was generally conceded that Pyrethrum aureum excelsior was the best.

Other Twickenham Features.

"Petunias are an extensive range from the large Giant Excelsior strain, of special value to market growers, producing enormous flowers in a wide range of shadings, to a bedding variety of the dwarf, compact type named Feltham Beauty; its height is but twelve inches; it flowers profusely, ranging in color from white to dark rose. This type of petunia is invaluable for bedding and is becoming popular. Schizanthus wisetonensis is another subject that has been wonderfully improved of late, and this strain with Watkins & Simpson is really grand, rich in color, especially the lighter and newer shades.

"Nemesias were also well to the fore and included Blue Gem, dwarf and compact, and Triumph hybrids, which are indeed a triumph and comprise a fine color selection, strong in the lighter shades. We noted Statice Suworowii quite true—this variety appears as cut in Covent Garden and is useful for decorative purposes. Among Statice sinuata, we were especially struck with True Blue. It is grown in increasing quantities and is a big improvement on the older type.

"The richness of the mimulus was well portrayed in Heath's Queen Prize strain, producing large flowers of exceptional coloring. Chrysanthemum coronarium, in addition to being useful for bedding, is an ideal subject for pot culture. To our mind, Tom Thumb, Golden Yellow and Primrose Gem represent just the right varieties for pot culture. They have large and distinct flowers, borne on bushes about fifteen inches high. The clarkias made a big display. Elegans Dorothy, of a similar shade to Dorothy Perkins rose, is wonderfully effective. There was also a fine, true stock of Purple King, besides many others.

"Then we came to the sweet peas—row after row, not grown to produce exhibition blooms, but to give a fair test naturally. The following appealed to us most: Constance Hinton, Lavender George Herbert, Tom Jones, R. F. Felton, a selected stock; King Mauve, Hawlmark Maroon, Hawlmark Pink, Rosabelle, Doris, new; Mascott's White, stout and vigorous; Dobbie's Queen, the best of its shade. Fair Lady was also good and Royal Scot.

At Feltham.

"In the seed grounds at Feltham in close proximity are large beds of Godetia Sunset and Clarkia Dorothy and melting away in the distance is Antirrhinum Carmine Queen, making a delightful picture; not only were noticed annuals and biennials, but good stretches of perennial subjects. There was a vast array of stately hollyhocks, singles and doubles, mixed and separate shades, including Exquisite, with large double flowers beautifully frilled, each white-margined petal richly blotched and including a goodly variety of shades.

"Tom Thumb viscarias about six inches high in pink and sky-blue are useful subjects for bedding purposes. There was also a grand selected strain of Sweet William Pink Beauty and masses of the Excelsior strain of Sunbeam poppies; we noticed in this strain Shirley poppies. Dwarf Little Gem, with flowers of rosy pink shading and floriferous, is pleasing.

"Pentstemon grandiflorum is represented in another Excelsior strain of which the firm is quite proud—the flowers are large, borne on large spikes and range from white to scarlet, many finely marked; they compare well with the choicest named varieties. There is one more culture which really must be mentioned and that is a strain of cosmea, double-flowered, comprising pink, white, crimson and orange. In form they resemble a double peony and are coming exceedingly true from seed. One, a beautiful glistening silver pink, was outstanding, so also was the white."

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The early bird gets a melon. The Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo., looking for the best strains in seed procurable, had purchased a number of melons for the seeds. Whoever happened along at the time the seeds were extracted, was invited to partake of the fruit. While one indulged in a luscious piece, the infinite varieties and forms of melons suggested themselves to one's mind. In this instance, the seeds were selected to perpetuate a choice strain of melons, while the fruit, sweet and juicy, was distributed to those individuals fortunate enough to be around at the time.

THE supply of Manetti will not equal the demand again this year and the price will be all it is thought the traffic will bear.

H. Q. TURNER, of Chester Springs, Pa., is entering the nursery business. Mr. Turner has 125 acres of ground, which he will soon plant to nursery stock.

THE company at Independence, O., that formerly operated under the name of Buskirk Bros., now does business under the style of the Independence Nurseries Co.

THE death of J. M. Underwood, known for so many years in connection with the Jewell Nursery, of Lake City, Minn., is reported on a forward page of this issue.

PROPAGATING PHLOXES.

Kindly advise me of the best method of propagating phloxes of the following varieties: Pantheon, Von Lassburg, Miss Lingard, Widar and Frederick Passy. I do not find any of the dealers handling seeds of these. W. C. H.—Pa.

Perennial phloxes of most named varieties will not breed true to name from the seeds, and for this reason it is necessary to propagate them from cuttings or divisions. A list of named varieties will be found in any of the plant catalogues, and the plants should be purchased in order to take off the cuttings. Cuttings may be taken in the fall from flowering stems which have been previously cut back, immediately after flowering. Cuttings two to three inches long should be selected, preferably with a heel, and rooted in sand in a shady coldframe. They should then be potted in light, sandy loam, and kept in a coldframe over winter, with a protection of sash and straw. Early in the spring these young plants should be set out similarly to seedlings, or placed in a nursery row until they have attained sufficient size for permanent planting. Another method employed where greenhouse facilities are available is to take up old plants from the garden in December, pot them and force growth. Good, strong cuttings may then be obtained in March, which are rooted and potted in the usual manner.

PEONIES NOT BLOOMING.

I should appreciate it much, indeed, if you would kindly explain to me why it is that my peonies will not produce blooms. I got six plants three years ago and out of the entire group only one bloomed this year. The others had small buds on them, which soon dried up and fell off. These plants have a south sun until about 2 p. m. and they are growing in a black, sandy loam. Last year I spaded a little well rotted cow manure into the ground about twelve inches from the plants.

N. DeB.—Mich.

Healthy peony plants of a blooming strain are sure to bloom, if they are properly planted in September or October, with the eyes placed not to exceed two inches below the surface of the ground. The soil should be well fertilized with rotten manure, and the plants should receive sufficient water during the blooming season.

It is a little difficult to answer the latter part of your inquiry, as failure to observe any of the above-mentioned points would be sufficient cause for peonies not blooming. If all of these conditions have been met and the peonies still refuse to bloom, there is only one thing left to do. In the middle of September scratch back the soil from the eyes on the plants and cut off one-half of the smaller eyes, leaving the remaining eyes well distributed over the entire tuber. If they do not bloom another season, they are not worth fussing with. W. A. Peterson.

PARK EXECUTIVES ELECT.

At Minneapolis.

The annual convention of the American Institute of Park Executives, which held forth at Minneapolis, Minn., came to an end Saturday evening, August 26. Before the climax of the last business session those assembled, more than 200, had elected the following officers for the coming year: President, Theodore Wirth, superintendent of the Minneapolis park system; vice-president, C. H. Meeds, engineer and executive of the Cincinnati park department; secretary-treasurer, William O. Doolittle, superintendent of Minot, N. D., parks. As directors there were elected Louis M. Le Saussure, superintendent of recreation of Memphis, Tenn., and Charles E. Chambers, commissioner of parks of Toronto, Canada. These were elected for 3-year periods to succeed Theodore Wirth and Henry W. Busch, Detroit, Mich. Mr. Busch's term had expired.

Pass Important Resolutions.

During the course of this convention many important points of national interest were discussed and much was accomplished.

A resolution pledging the support of the association to the barberry eradication campaign provoked a heated discussion and was adopted only on a second vote, after the first had resulted in a tie. The resolution asked park executives to "use their best effort to strike out and destroy any common barberry bushes" that may be growing on property over which they have control.

Among other resolutions adopted by the convention were the following:

Every park in affiliation with the association shall give earnest consideration to the development of a rose garden as a unit of recognized importance in the park system.

The administration of national parks as at present conducted under the direction of Steven B. Mathers was approved.

Health authorities and legislatures were by resolution urged to assist in safeguarding the health of tourists visiting camps in various states by providing the necessary authority, so that sanitary conditions may prevail and pollution of lakes and streams may be discontinued.

One resolution urged that complete park systems be included in every comprehensive city plan. This resolution declared that "we believe that every city should set a goal of at least one acre of park for every 100 inhabitants, such parks to be distributed so as to be available for use by all of the people," and that "wherever possible the shores of our lakes and rivers should be reserved to the use of all the people."

The association adopted a memorial to Charles M. Loring, father of Minneapolis parks, which described Mr. Loring as a "lover of flowers, lover of trees, lover of men, a lover of all that was good and noble, a faithful worker in His vineyard," and declared that "every park man owes much to him who, as a pioneer, blazed the trail through the dense forests of ignorance, indifference and irresponsiveness to our beautiful parks, guided only by the star of faith and love for his fellow men."

However, this meeting was not devoted to business only. For instance, Tuesday afternoon a 62-mile motor jaunt was taken through the various parks of Minneapolis and many places of interest were visited. Then, Tuesday night a banquet was given, with W. H. Bovey, of the park board commissioners, as toastmaster. At the banquet there were many pretty toasts, along with some remarks of a deeper nature. Wednesday night all the visitors were entertained at Lyndall park, where a children's pageant was being held. And when final adjournment was called Saturday night, August 26, it was done at a delightful luncheon tendered the guests by the citizens of Duluth, Minn., whither they had gone that afternoon for a tour of the parks and boulevards at Duluth. Thursday night the guests went to Hibbing, Minn., where an iron mine was inspected, as well as the park there.

Many good talks were heard. Among them was a paper on "Municipal Athletics," by K. B. Raymond, superintendent of athletics at Minneapolis. E. W. Johnson, of St. Paul, spoke on "The Merits of Social Dancing in a Recreation System." The organization of Minneapolis athletics was explained by W. H. Fox, director of baseball, football and hockey; B. G. Leighton, director of playgrounds, and H. A. Johnson, director of recreation centers.

Municipal Rose Gardens.

Robert Pyle, president of the American Rose Society, addressed the convention on municipal rose gardens. After telling of the achievements of the American Rose Society in this and other respects, he described the rose gardens now in existence in this country. He said in this connection:

"I think it was Colonel Goethals who said that the man who deserves most praise is he who carries through an achievement the first time. It is most auspicious for this cause in which I am sure we are all interested that the man who for the first time carried through to success a real municipal rose garden, so far as I know, is your honored director, Theodore Wirth, who as far back as 1910 made even more famous the Hartford park system with the planting of the beautiful municipal rose garden in Elizabeth park. And now the people of Minneapolis also have had opportunity to appraise, as worth far more than its cost, the rose garden which Mr. Wirth has established in Lyndale park in this city. August 5, Mr. Wirth wrote me: 'Our local people here believe in the rose garden, and we could not take it away from them if we wanted to.' If there was time I should like to tell you about the municipal rose gardens in Cleveland, Detroit, Portland and elsewhere.

"Last season saw the establishment of new rose gardens of municipal construction in New Rochelle and at other points, and within the last month Mayor Curley, of the city of Boston, has announced the construction in Franklin park of a $100,000 garden, which includes a rose garden to contain 'all the best of popular kinds of bush roses and also great numbers of climbing roses to be trained on trellises.'

"As the result of a referendum recently conducted by the American Rose Society, locations in no less than forty-five cities have been suggested for municipal rose gardens. Each of these locations has been sponsored by resident members of the American Rose Society, whose names I shall be glad to have given to the park superintendents in each of the cities so designated if desired. The American Rose Society feels deeply that the children of these cities, too often confined like cliff dwellers, are entitled to their rightful heritage of rose knowledge and rose love. How these youngsters may be expected to profit by such opportunities as a municipal rose garden might afford them and some day grow up to carry on your work, may be exemplified by the story told me by a friend who had been working down where the children had no playground except the city streets. She noticed, in passing, a group of children on their knees, closely inspecting some object on the sidewalk where a few grains of oats from a horse's feed bag had sprouted and sprung up between the cracks in the pavement, when one little fellow looked up into her sympathetic face with fine enthusiasm. Pointing to the blades of grass, he said: 'Madam, some day here a park stands.' For the love of children we appeal to you to push forward the work already well begun, so that the time will soon come when no large city will be without its official garden of roses.

"As evidence of the supreme appreciation on the part of your patrons to be expected from this work, let us for a moment observe the attention given, according to record, to the municipal rose garden in Hartford. On the best information available, I have it that in 1920, 23,000 visitors was the total for July 4, and this number was greatly increased on Rose Sunday, July 11, when every city and community within a radius of 100 miles was represented by people in automobiles. In the two years since, on these occasions, the attendance has been steadily increasing, showing no less than 35,000 people in a single day and 149,600 for the year, certainly proof positive of the popular appeal produced by a well conducted municipal rose garden.

"I note by your program that you have epitomized the saying of one of your landscape architects who 'would have the entire city a work of art,' and Emerson has called agriculture 'mother of the arts.' How fitting, therefore, in approaching the subject of a rose garden, to recognize that we are definitely entering into the field of one of the fine arts! The message of the American Rose Society is an appeal to you for the establishment of a rose garden in every city park system and a request that you should adopt, as the American standard, your recognition of the fact that no park or park system is complete without its municipal rose garden."

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Last week brought no decided change in the market over the previous week, except that it is struggling under an almost overwhelming deluge of gladioli. Asters are plentiful and, as they are reasonable in price, they move readily. Roses are in good supply and generally of good quality. Already the new crop from several growers is beginning to come in and shows promising indications. Good carnations are scarce, but the new crop will be making its appearance shortly. Dahlias are showing in increasing quantity.

Various Notes.

Vincent Berarducci has a new truck for his shipping department.

Henry Patry was awarded a handsome diamond-studded elk's tooth watch charm at the recent outing of Providence lodge, Order of Elks, for the best grotesque costume worn in the parade.

Samuel Reisneck, of Bowers & Reisneck, was a business visitor in Boston and vicinity last week.

O'Connor the Florist has a new greenhouse, 25x70, under construction as an addition to his range on Mineral Spring avenue, Pawtucket.

John Lindbloom, for many years with Miss Willard, at the Massachusetts Greenhouses, has taken a position with J. E. Koppelman, at his greenhouses, on Pawtucket avenue, East Providence.

Lawrence Hay is making extensive improvements at his range of houses near Rumford, in East Providence.

Mrs. Otis P. Chapman, Jr., of Westerly, had the decorations for the big Read-Moorehead wedding, at Watch Hill, last week. Dahlias, gladioli and clematis, with palms and ferns, were used.

B. M. Latham, of Saunders' Gardens, and Harold Stewart have been appointed in charge of the plant and flower department of the fourteenth annual fair of the Providence County Fair at North Scituate, September 21 to 23.

MANSFIELD, MASS.

Stage Gladiolus Show.

The fourth annual exhibition of the Mansfield Gladiolus Association, which was held in the town hall at Mansfield, Mass., last week, was by far one of the best displays ever seen in that section of the country, the flowers entered in the various classes being of the highest type. The judges were A. L. Stephen, of Waban; Thomas Proctor, of Wrentham, and Clark W. Brown, of Ashland, who expressed themselves as highly pleased with the fine exhibition.

Among the larger exhibitors of gladioli were Albert Lehan, William S. Harris, of Mansfield; Frank O. Shepardson, of Mansfield; A. L. Stephen, of Waban; Massasoit Gardens, of North Attleboro; Elmer Smith, of Myricks; E. N. Fischer, of Jamaica Plain; Clark W. Brown, of Ashland; Mrs. John Zeestraten, of East Bridgewater, and the Saunders Gardens, of North Scituate.

Besides the gladioli there were several displays of dahlias, among the largest exhibitors being Carver & Sampson, of Brockton, who showed thirty-five different flowers, the blooms being both beautiful in color and exceedingly large.

One of the most attractive displays was that made for exhibition only by Dr. B. M. Latham, proprietor of the Saunders Gardens, of North Scituate, R. I. This occupied the entire west end of the hall; the name of Saunders Gardens made up in letters, with a background of oak leaves, made a beautiful and conspicuous display. It took 600 spikes to make the display, the spikes used being of The Pearl variety.

An unusual gladiolus was on exhibition. It is known as G. dracocephalus, a wild African variety, owned by William E. Clark, of Sunnymede Gardens, of Sharon. It drew the attention of many visitors who had never seen one before. There were many amateurs, who won in many classes. W. H. M.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

ALLOWANCE FOR ENLARGING.

Kindly advise me regarding the heating requirements of a greenhouse, 14x50 feet. There are three feet of glass in the side walls. The north end and one-half of the south end of the house are exposed. I wish to maintain a carnation temperature. I have some 2-inch pipe on hand which I should like to use. How large should the heater be? Would it be advisable to get a larger size than is at present necessary, as I expect to make future additions to the house?

A. E. R.—Ill.

It is suggested that the house be heated with three 2-inch overhead flow pipes and six 2-inch returns. Place one flow pipe on each side wall plate and the other two feet below the ridge. Arrange the returns in three coils of two pipes each under the benches.

Instead of buying a boiler for the present house, we suggest that one be purchased with a rating of 1,000 to 1,200 square feet, with a grate twenty-five or twenty-six inches in diameter. This will heat two additional houses of the size now being constructed, or one house, 28x50 feet. Later on it may be convenient to enlarge the house to 28x100 or 150 feet.

SIZE OF BOILER REQUIRED.

I have two greenhouses, 18x125 and 14x125 feet respectively. The first house has one foot of exposed wall and two feet of glass on both sides. The second house has one foot of exposed wall and no glass on the sides. The temperature to be maintained is 50 degrees in zero weather. Kindly advise me of the best method of arranging the pipes and state how large a boiler will be required. W. A. M.—Pa.

To heat the two houses described above, you should use a boiler rated at about 2,000 square feet of hot water radiation. While the grate area will vary somewhat in boilers of different makes, it should be not far from six square feet or, in a round boiler, thirty inches in diameter. The smoke pipe should be not less than ten inches in diameter and twelve inches will be preferable in most boilers. The smokestack should be twelve inches square inside and thirty feet high.

If the arrangement of the benches in the wide house is such that two of the returns can be carried in the walks, it would be well to use three 2½-inch overhead flow pipes and six 2-inch returns, carrying one flow pipe on each side wall plate and the other under the ridge. Use a coil of two 2-inch returns on each wall and place two returns in the walks. Another way of piping this house would be to carry a 3-inch flow pipe on each side wall, with seven 2-inch returns on the walls, placing the odd return on the wall most exposed to cold winds. In the other house carry a 2½-inch flow on each side wall, with two 2-inch returns under each flow. Run the flow pipes as well as the returns downhill and connect the highest point in each flow pipe with the expansion tank.

HOUSE STANDING ALONE.

We have a greenhouse, 14x40 feet, which stands alone. What is the best heating arrangement for this house? The height to the ridge is nine feet, while the greenhouse itself runs east and west. There are twenty inches of glass in the two side walls, with glass in both ends. We wish to maintain 60 degrees in zero weather, and will use hot water heat. How large should the boiler be and how much pipe will be required?

T. & M.—Pa.

If hard coal is to be used, a boiler with a grate twenty inches in diameter and rated for 400 square feet of hot water radiation should give good results. It would be preferable to use a 22-inch grate and a boiler rated for 500 square feet of radiation, if soft coal is to be used.

The best results are secured when the top of the boiler is below the lower end of the returns. If this can be arranged, you can expect to heat the house described above by carrying a 2½-inch flow pipe on each side wall plate, with eight 2-inch returns, arranged in two coils of four pipes each on the walls.

USING OLD PIPES.

I have erected a greenhouse, 20x50 feet, which is eight and one-half feet to the ridge, located in a sheltered spot. I shall heat this house with hot water. I have on hand 125 3-inch pipes and 500 2-inch pipes which I should like to use. The temperature to be maintained is 50 degrees, for bedding plants. The greenhouse is connected to a store and I intend to put the boiler in the basement of the store. Four benches are being installed, and I intend to run a 3-inch main on the side walls and two returns under the center benches, if this is feasible. C. F. R.—Conn.

A boiler to heat the house described above should have a rating of about 600 square feet of hot water radiation, if soft coal is to be used. This would require a grate about twenty-four inches in diameter. A slightly smaller boiler might be used with hard coal.

The needed radiation would be furnished, if, as suggested, a 3-inch flow pipe is run on each side wall, with two 2-inch returns under each of the four benches, but it would be preferable to use three 2-inch flow pipes and seven 2-inch returns, placing the odd flow pipe under the ridge and distributing the returns under the benches. It will be possible to use two 2-inch flow pipes and eight 2-inch returns, provided there is no objection to placing the third flow pipe under the ridge and if, as is probably the case, the lowest part of the returns is considerably above the top of the boiler.

The 3-inch pipe may be used for a main flow and return to the boiler.

DETERMINING RADIATION.

Would a hot water heater with 160 square feet of radiation heat a greenhouse to 60 degrees in zero weather? The greenhouse in question is 10x42 feet. H. D. P.—Md.

If the house is well built and there is no glass in the side walls, about 160 square feet of radiation will be required for a greenhouse 10x42 feet, to heat it to 60 degrees in zero weather. This would be furnished by one 2½-inch flow pipe and two 2-inch returns on each side wall.

Whether a hot water heater with 160 square feet of radiation will heat a greenhouse, 10x42 feet, to 60 degrees in zero weather, will depend largely upon the actual capacity of the boiler. Especially when soft coal is to be used, the only safe way to determine the size of boiler required for a greenhouse with a given amount of radiation is to select one with a manufacturer's rating about twice as large as the actual amount of radiation in the house, particularly if less than 1,000 square feet of radiation is to be supplied. This is because most boilers are rated on their capacity with hard coal and because there will always be some radiating surface in the way of mains, etc., that will not furnish heat for the greenhouse proper.

You cannot expect to heat more than 240 square feet of glass to 60 degrees with a boiler rated for 160 square feet of radiation. This would be in a house 10x20 feet, without glass in the side walls.

The Market.

Business took a decided turn for the better the beginning of last week. Each day was a busy one. Without any apparent connection, orders increased in number as the mercury rose. The hottest day in four years, Thursday, August 24, when the temperature reached 104 degrees, was heavier than the average busy day in summer. Gladioli are getting scarce in the market. Asters are not in oversupply, especially the best grades. New roses are coming in and are good for the first cutting.

Local S. A. F. Committees Meet.

The meeting of the S. A. F. local committee chairmen Monday, August 21, was intended to be the final gathering of this group. Instead of this, it was suggested by several present that the general committee be held together and regular meetings be held at luncheon once a month. The first Friday of each month was decided upon as the most convenient for everyone. Such a fine spirit of friendliness and coöperation has developed from the work of preparing for the S. A. F. convention that it has been an inspiration to all concerned. Through the weekly gatherings, when progress was reported on committee work, men who have been in business for years have come to know one another better than they could in any other way.

This closer relation will become a bond that will help the florists' business and be of benefit to the individuals. The meetings will be open to all members of the Florists' Club. When visiting florists are in the city they will be welcome.

Last Monday's meeting was for the purpose of winding up affairs of the convention. Bills were ordered paid. Letters were read from exhibitors who were pleased with the manner in which their exhibits were handled. They said they had never been more royally treated than in Kansas City. Letters were also read from many delegates who expressed appreciation of their reception here, and from others who were unable to attend.

Each committee reported and was complimented on its work. One that was especially commended was the decoration committee, of which Hugo R. Neff was chairman. Mr. Neff reported as part of his work that seventy-five bouquets had been placed in rooms of women visitors, besides bouquets for officers and entertainers at the president's reception the night of August 15 and the ball of the Ladies' S. A. F. the following night. Vases of flowers were placed on sixty tables at Electric park; on all the tables at the various clubs entertaining florists through the convention; 1,500 cat-tails and fifty pounds of oak foliage were part of the decoration of 180 street lamps. Sixty baskets of flowers were given to the editorial force of the Kansas City Star the day following the radio program; 800 roses were given to the Chamber of Commerce at the close of the convention. In addition to all of these, flowers were sent to officials and workers in the various city departments, the Electric Light Co., Express Co., Convention hall and various others who helped to make the convention a success.

L. R. Bohannon, on behalf of the general committee and all the Kansas City florists, thanked William L. Rock for his splendid work as general chairman. Mr. Rock, in reply, expressed his appreciation of the work of all committees and of the publicity given by the trade papers. Mr. Rock said that the coöperation of his fellow workers made his labor a pleasure. Mr. Rock has kept a complete record of all the meetings and a file of all the newspaper publicity. More space was devoted to the S. A. F. convention, and for a greater length of time before the meeting, than to any previous gathering here. Mr. Rock wished to resign as chairman of the committee, but was not permitted to do so. He will continue to act and in case of absence from the city will delegate someone else to preside in his stead.

Various Notes.

In the S. A. F. bowling tournament, Wednesday evening, August 16, seven teams contested, two from St. Louis, two from Kansas City, one from Denver, one from Chicago and one from Omaha. St. Louis team No. 1 won the silver loving cup given by the Kansas City Florists' Club. The score was 2,203. The Denver team, with 2,092, took second place. Omaha won the booby prize. Individual prizes were won by W. H. Kuhlman, Chicago, 524; Charles Meyer, Denver, 504; Ernst Amling, Chicago, 490; L. Donahoe, Kansas City, 488; Harry Harlow, Denver, 477; Edwin Denker, St. Louis, 465; Frank A. Windler, St. Louis, 464; Carl Beyer, St. Louis, 463; Mr. Meyer, Omaha, 451; W. L. Hulse, Kansas City, 444; Emil Glauber, Denver, 437.

A called meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the Rock building Friday, August 25, at 8:30 p. m., for the nomination of officers for the ensuing year. The election will be held at the September meeting. Those nominated are: President, W. J. Barnes, Glenn K. Parker, M. E. Carter; vice-president, M. E. Carter, C. A. Chandler, August Luther; secretary, Mrs. W. E. Williams; treasurer, Mrs. T. A. Moseley, W. C. Murray, Hugo R. Neff, Robert Fields. E. D. Ellsworth, proprietor of the Rosery, joined the club. Mr. Ellsworth recently moved from Bonner Springs, Kan., where he has several greenhouses. Hugo R. Neff suggested that the Florists' Club enter a team in the Kansas City bowling tournament, to be held this fall. Mr. Neff was authorized to make all necessary arrangements for the entry of this team. T. J. Noll, president, appointed C. A. Chandler, M. E. Carter and E. J. Barnes to audit the books of the treasurer, as required by the by-laws.

It is light gray in color and the only glazing material that can be applied with the hands the same as putty, and will not stick. It retains its elasticity indefinitely and prevents breakage of glass. Withstands heat, cold and dampness and will adhere to wood, iron, stone, etc. Beds perfectly and lasts as long as the glass lasts. If the glass breaks, Elastic Glazing Composition can be cut out without injury to the wood, as it remains flexible.

Kansas City established the custom of sending personal invitations to an S. A. F. convention. Between 9,000 and 10,000 invitations were sent by the Florists' Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

The following letters have been received by the Florists' Club from Mrs. S. S. Pennock and the Topeka, Kan., Florists' Club:

Kansas City Florists' Club: In leaving your beautiful city I want to thank you very, very much for all you have done for us. The flowers have made our rooms beautiful and have been a constant reminder of our good friends here. The beautiful corsage bouquets which were given to me were lovely, but beyond the flowers I have been touched by such true, open-hearted hospitality. The west has the true spirit of love and friendliness and many easterners should profit thereby. The wonderful gift of the S. A. F. to Mr. Pennock is something we are proud of and, as I said, our children will value it after us. We have enjoyed Kansas City in spite of the heat, and no one can be responsible for the weather. We shall hope to welcome you to Philadelphia in the near future and shall look forward to it. Very sincerely, Alice F. Pennock.

Kansas City Florists' Club; Dear Mr. Rock, Chairman: It is with great pleasure that we, the members of the Topeka Florists' Club, write to you to express our appreciation of your courtesy and untiring efforts in entertaining the delegates of the S. A. F. so highly. Words can only express in a humble way the wonderfully good time we had while in your city. The programs were all fine and we wish we could find words of ample quality to express our sentiments to your artists. We congratulate you, each and every one of the members of the Kansas City Florists' Club. Yours sincerely, C. E. Hubbard, W. A. Bolinger, William Sachs, Arlo Hubbard, M. G. Lord, Thomas H. Keershan, R. B. Kreig.

L. R. Bohannon, of the Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co., received a large order for lilies, orchids, valley and roses from Mrs. Lord's Flower Shop, Topeka, Kan., Thursday, August 24, with a request for all the help possible. Mrs. Lord had orders for more than $1,000 worth of work for the funeral of a Santa Fe railroad official. This telephone order was received by Mr. Bohannon at 2 p. m. A 5 p. m. A. L. Randall Co., were on their way to Topeka in Mr. Bohannon's car. They made the trip in three hours. They began work at 4 o'clock the next morning and by 1 o'clock, an hour before the funeral, had all the orders ready for delivery. Among the large pieces, in which 300 lilies and 700 roses were used, were a blanket, a double casket spray and a cross eight feet high. Mrs. Lord had orders for about forty pieces. There were about 200 pieces in all at the funeral.

Miss Elizabeth Hayden returned a week ago from a visit in Wisconsin and Illinois. She left immediately for Estes Park, Colo., to remain until the early part of September.

Mrs. Alice Boggess, Miss Lou Boggess and Miss Nellie and Justine Norris will spend the first week of September in the Ozarks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Rock are in the country for a vacation.

Samuel Murray's force spent Saturday afternoon, August 26, making up work for a funeral in Excelsior Springs, Mo. The orders were sent down on the interurban Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Alpha Elberfield have returned from a week's motor trip through Iowa.

E. D. Ellsworth has completed two new greenhouses adjoining his retail store. There are about 4,000 square feet of glass.

Robert Houston, route clerk, and Miss Bersabee Aldana, of the office force of the Alpha Floral Co., were married Wednesday, August 23. They were given an electric percolator and silver coffee service by their associates. This makes the sixth wedding in the Alpha store in eleven years, both parties in each ceremony being members of the Alpha organization.

The Florists' Club feels complimented by the attention given the S. A. F. No advertising is ever permitted in Electric park. Several floral features were introduced the night of the jollification, August 17, which closed the convention. One was the "Say It with Flowers" chorus in the Silhouette Garden. Another was a special "Say It with Flowers" number in the electric fountain. An arch made of 1,000 roses was held aloft by four young women. Flowers were massed around the base of the fountain. These special concessions to the florists were given by the park management to E. A. Humfeld. Mr. Humfeld is a personal friend of M. G. Heim, owner of the park. Mr. Humfeld has planned and planted the gardens in the park for the last twenty-five years. J. E. K.

Branded for Your Protection

YOUR guarantee in purchasing Greenhouse Glass manufactured by the American Window Glass Company is the grade marking indelibly branded on the end of every box. The standards used in grading our product are so high that our "B" quality is difficult to distinguish from ordinary "A" and our "A" grade is the choice of all growers and greenhouse construction companies seeking higher quality. An excellent combination of quality with economy is to use our "A" grade on the south side of your house, with "B" for the north side and gables.

For Greenhouse Glazing

The careful grower demands glass that is reasonably flat and of uniform thickness on the edges; it must be comparatively free from the blisters that cause sunburn and of a clear, refined metal to admit all the light there is in the dark days of winter. The branded product of the American Window Glass Company meets all these requirements. Serious errors in flattening or annealing, noticeable discoloration, blisters or other defects are not permitted in "A" or "B" quality glass. Both grades are furnished, carefully packed, single and double strength, in all the sizes popular for greenhouse glazing.

Get acquainted with our Specialties—29, 34 and 39-ounce Glass

When you obtain an estimate from a jobber or greenhouse construction builder, specify American Window Glass Company's branded product and look for the brand on every box delivered. Write us direct if the dealer does not handle it.

WHITE HYBRID DELPHINIUMS.
Several years ago Wm. Toole, Sr., discovered a plant among some Delphinium Formosum which bore pure white flowers. Since then he has crossed them with choice hybrids and selected from the best of these.
In general habit of growth they are like a good strain of hybrids of the blue color. Some of them are double though most are single, some have dark centers but most are pure white.
The plants we offer have all been selected and marked while in flower and no inferior specimens are sent out.
Price for strong selected plants, carefully packed, 35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100, $225.00 per 1000.
WILLIAM TOOLE & SON,
Garry-nee-Dule, Baraboo, Wis.

For many years we have given special attention to the betterment of Delphiniums and we feel confident that no better plants or better strain can be had anywhere. Ask the florists who have forced our stock.
